THE BUSINESS PAPER OF THE WAREHOUSE INDUSTRY

Vol. 24, No. 1 New York, N. Y. January, 1925

PROOF of Federal's greater economy of operation and greater dependability of service is the steadily increasing number of Federals used in the moving and warehousing industry.

For short rapid deliveries in the city, for long heavy cross-country hauls, Federals are the preference of experienced operators. Every Federal insures LOWER COST PER TON-MILE.

George S. Kingsley

THIRTY YEARS OF

Kingsley built Ware-Houses

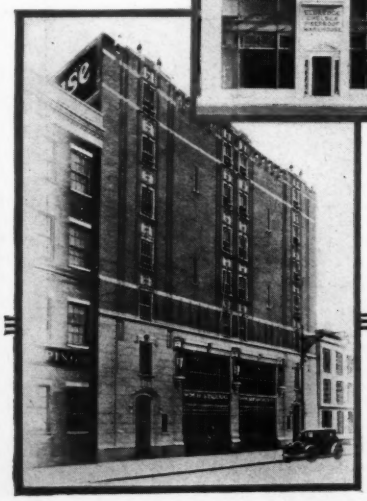

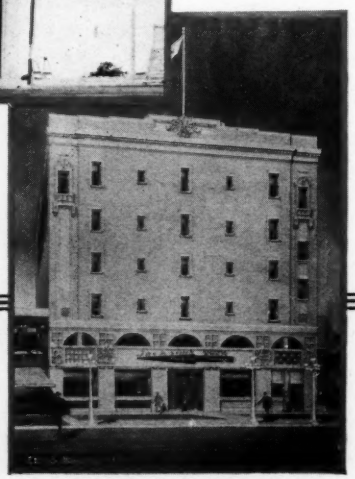

Metropolitan Fireproof Warehouse Corp., 83rd and Amsterdam Ave., New York City. Chas. S. Morris, Pres. New York's latest.

The new William H. Strang Fireproof Warehouse, 900 Atlantic Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y. —a unit efficiently serving Brooklyn.

SPECIALIZATION

George S. Kingsley
Architect of Warehouses

A WAREHOUSEMAN recognizes a good warehouse when he sees it—

An engineer can follow good warehouse plans—

A builder can build a good warehouse from good plans, but—

An architect can design a good warehouse only if he is a good warehouseman, a good engineer and a good builder as well as a good architect.

Which explains the success George S. Kingsley has had in his thirty years of warehouse designing and building—he is that rare combination: a warehouseman, an engineer, an architect, a builder! A specialist in warehouse design and erection!

As a warehouseman he can design the warehouseman's viewpoint of space utilization and exterior appearance—as a builder he can draw plans which permit economy in construction—as an engineer he can build for strength and safety!

It is this unusual combination of accomplishments plus thirty years of specialized experience which enables George S. Kingsley to design and build warehouses, the exteriors of which are perpetual advertisements—the inside layouts of which produce greatest returns on the investment.

With monuments to his ability in every section where warehouses are used—with some clients who have as many as eight plants (all designed by Kingsley)—it is safe to assume that you will be equally satisfied.

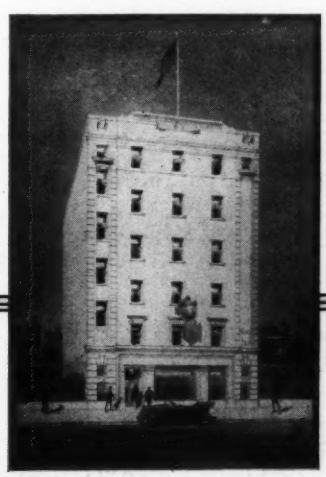

A consultation involves no obligation.

Safety—

The Big Four stands ready to serve you in these half million square miles of territory (from Canada to the Carolinas—from the Atlantic to the Mississippi) with a complete and modern truck transportation system.

Operating throughout this vast district, with offices in all the chief cities and a fleet of giant trucks constantly in use, the Big Four Transfer Company offers a fast and economical moving service over any distance up to 700 miles.

25 Years Experience in Moving Household Goods and Office Furniture have taught us the proper way to handle and transfer the most prized possessions of an individual or the entire office equipment of a business concern via Big 4 are quick, economical, efficient, and practically eliminate hotel and other incidental expense, when salesmen or branch managers, executives or a whole working organization are transferred from city to city.

Long Distance Removals

It Saves Time and Money in every business. Because of centralized control and the immense volume of business handled by this company's vans, it has been possible to arrange definite schedules and to assure loads in both directions on a great majority of the trips.

Regular Schedules

Big 4 vans run on scheduled routes that lie between the larger cities. However, a Big 4 van can go wherever there is a highway, and it is ready to go when needed, no matter how short the notice. We have reached a point of efficiency where we operate on a schedule and tariff as accurate and dependable as those of a railroad.

Small Lots

Big 4 service does not stop with the customer who has one or more van loads to move. It extends also to the moving of small lots of furniture and valuables. For this purpose special "pool" vans operate regularly between many of the more important cities, carrying loads made up of a number of small shipments. Many customers have found it profitable to use this service for even a few pieces of furniture.

These are the reasons why we say: "Anywhere East of the Mississippi River Ship the Big Four Way!"

8 Ford Trucks Handle Deliveries For Over One Hundred Merchants

Providing a delivery service for the average merchant at a cost to him equal to or less than maintenance of his own service, calls for dependable trucking units plus a maximum working capacity and the minimum operating cost.

"Our entire service is based on the efficiency, dependability and economy of Ford units" says Charles V. Jennings of the Merchants Parcel Delivery Co., Portland, Ore.

"Ten years ago, with one Ford delivery, we made our first contract with a Portland firm for the delivery of its merchandise. Today, with a fleet of eight Fords, we handle the business of over a hundred, varying from dressmakers to department stores.

"Our latest addition is a Ford ton truck upon which we installed a van body. This unit has proven to us conclusively that an attractive body design is more than worth the extra investment.

"Tires are averaging better than 6,000 miles and gas consumption runs about 12 miles to the gallon. Ford ideals, built into Ford cars and trucks, backed by Ford service, afford a combination which was the chief reason for our adoption of Ford units as a standard."

Your nearest Authorized Ford dealer can furnish you many interesting facts and figures on the cost of operating Ford Trucks in your business. Call on him for this information and a practical demonstration!

Prosperity Is Predicted for Warehouse Industry in 1925

Majority of Opinions Expressed by Trade Association Presidents Is Optimistic—Factors Considered Favorable Include Confidence in Coolidge Administration and Approach to International Stability

IF the opinions of the presidents of three national, two sectional and twenty State warehousing associations may be considered as fairly representative of the composite thought of the industry, prospects seem decidedly bright for marked improvement in the public storage business for 1925.

Farm prices are at peak, building conditions are excellent, steel prices are higher, railroad earnings are better, and the general prices level is slowly advancing, according to observations by Industrial Digest; and in telegrams received by Distribution & Warehousing from the presidents of twenty-five trade associations some of these factors are mentioned as likely to contribute toward a better year for warehousing.

Here and there is sounded, in the telegrams, a pessimistic note, but the majority opinion is equivalent to optimism. Several of the presidents urge maintenances of high standards as essential to business improvement.

The result of the November elections, sustaining the present Republican Administration at Washington, is cited frequently as a reason for confidence that business in general will prosper during the new year, with warehousing benefiting commensurately. Promise of continued readjustment of the foreign situation also is considered significant.

The telegrams came as replies to a message which Distribution & Warehousing sent to the ranking executive officers of the national, sectional and State merchandise and furniture storage associations in the United States and Canada. In this annual Warehouse Directory issue, published at the beginning of a new year, these opinions from some of the industry's recognized leaders are here set down. The warehouseman will find in them food for thought. Pessimists in the industry should be particularly impressed when they find that the majority opinion is in direct opposition to their own.

The telegrams follow:

GARDNER POOLE, president of the American Warehousemen's Association and president of the Commonwealth Ice & Cold Storage Co., Boston—

"Warehousing conditions for 1925 are bound to show some improvement with business conditions here and abroad more stable. Trade tendencies will be away from overcautiousness and the hand-to-mouth method, toward increased confidence and general building up of inventories for spot stock distribution."

A New Economic Era

E. B. Gould, president of the National Furniture Warehousemen's Association and secretary of the Pioneer Warehouse Co., San Diego, Cal.—

"The coming year should be a very good one for both the furniture and commercial storage industry. We are entering into a period of business prosperity founded upon a new era of economic and financial conditions throughout the entire world. Building continues to be active. Prices on merchandise and commodities are advancing. Farm products are bringing more than they have for some time. The steel mills, a good index to better business, have advanced prices and there are heavy tonnage orders on their books. Present political principles have been approved and people in this country are highly satisfied with the new Administration. If the present outlook for retail and manufacturing industries continues to improve in the same marked way as it has in the past two months there is no reason why the same should not be reflected in the warehousing industry. The outlook for the coming year is the best that we have had for several years."

J. B. Baillargeon, president of the Canadian Storage & Transfermen's Association and president of J. B. Baillargeon Express, Ltd., Montreal—

"Business prospects for 1925 are better than for the year ending, owing to more settled conditions in the world and to expected increase in exchange of business with foreign countries."

Thomas J. Skellet, president of the Central Warehousemen's Club and president of the Skellet Company, Minneapolis—

"I predict great improvement in the warehousing business for 1925 because the American people have voiced confidence in our Government. The purchasing power of producers has greatly increased. Stocks are low. There is plenty of money for development of legitimate business. Warehousing is well organized, but the industry should be given more publicity."

In the Pacific Northwest

Joint telegram from W. G. Dickinson, president of the Pacific Coast Furniture Warehousemen's Association and president of the Lambert Transfer & Storage Co., Seattle, and James A. Walker, president of the Washington State Warehousemen's Association and president of the Reliable Transfer & Storage Co., Seattle—

"Warehousemen in Pacific Northwest cities anticipate increased business for the coming year. Reasons: First, the lumber industry is healthy. Second, farming prices are favorable. Third, building activities are increasing. Fourth, more people are arriving than are leaving. Fifth, business conditions are steady on account of the national elections. Sixth, big conventions and fraternal and other organizations in the Coast cities. Seventh, everybody is optimistic."

The opinions of the following State association presidents are arranged alphabetically by States:

C. C. Fleming, president of the Alabama Transfer & Warehousemen's Association and president of Charlies' Transfer Co., Birmingham—

"Nineteen-twenty-five will be better than ever before. The entire country is on a better business basis. Recovery from reconstruction is evident. The largest improvement is due to the fact that manufacturers have learned that quick, reasonable distribution through warehouses is better. Local conditions are helped by extensive planned improvements of steel industry and service corporations."

S. M. Haslett, president of the California Warehousemen's Association and president of the Haslett Warehouse Co., San Francisco—

"I believe that because of the outlook for good rains for the coming winter and the confidence which this will give the business world the outlook for 1925 in warehousing, as in all other lines of business endeavor, is very promising in the Golden State."

E. A. Howard Baker, president of the Colorado Transfer & Warehousemen's Association and manager of the Kennicott-Patterson Transfer Co., Denver—

"Men engaged in the warehouse industry may safely look for considerable improvement in 1925. Our government and other large industries have recognized the importance of our industry in the physical distribution of the nation's products. The votes cast November the fourth indicate confidence and belief in the business institutions of this country."

E. G. Mooney, president of the Connecticut Warehousemen's Association and president of Hartford Despatch & Warehouse Co., Hartford—

"The outlook for the warehouse business in Connecticut appears very good for the coming year. At meeting of Connecticut Warehousemen's Association held in Hartford in November all members went on record as having good business in 1924, and they predicted that 1925 would be better."

Wilson V. Little, president of the Illinois Association of Warehousemen and superintendent of the Western Warehousing Co., Chicago—

"Confident from stabilizing influences at home and abroad manufacturers are increasing production and extending markets. In addition, the manufacturer is adapting himself to hand-to-mouth policy of his customers and is compelled to maintain stocks locally to meet competition, but enjoying advantages of frequent turnover and prompt collections. Warehouses should prosper."

Joseph H. Meyer, president of the Illinois Furniture Warehousemen's Association and president of the Federal Fire Proof Storage Co., Chicago—

"My guess is that in 1925 we will experience a decided slump in storage but it will only be a slump from where we had no normal right to be to where we properly belong under normal storage conditions. In other words we are due for a return to the condition of 60 to 80 per cent filled. All in all we are in a healthy condition. We have the profits of the feast to sustain us during the possible lean years to come and we have excellent plants to take care of the normal business which we once regarded as being quite sufficient. It behooves us to adjust ourselves to the new order of things. Do not look for a rush of storage during 1925. It will not come, because it is not there to come."

J. P. Woodworth, president of the Indiana Transfer & Warehousemen's Association and manager of Woodworth's Storage & Transfer, South Bend—

"Prospects are unfavorable for anything better than 50 or 60 per cent. High rent and no work filled warehouses. Cutting rent and work opening up are causes of warehouses being empty."

Along the Mississippi Valley

Herman Ewert, president of the Iowa Warehousemen's Association and president of the Ewert & Richter Express & Storage Co., Davenport—

"The business outlook for the Mississippi Valley is very encouraging. The warehousing business feels the thrill of expanding activities. Confidence after the elections allows capital to expand, and thereby the arteries of business feel this pulse, which follows into all labor channels. Prosperity is ahead."

George D. Magruder, president of the Maryland Furniture Warehousemen's Association and president of Graham's Storage Warehouse Company of Baltimore City—

"My opinion is that business conditions should greatly improve during the year 1925. Provided our industry has the courage to maintain the proper standard of operating our business, we should share in the prosperity that will unquestionably present itself after the new year.

William R. Howard, president of the Maryland Warehousemen's Association and secretary of the Terminal Warehouse Company of Baltimore City—

"We find a deeper interest in basic commodities than for many months and this indicates a sound foundation for manufactured products. Our patrons generally are all sanguine of better business and are asking for more floor

12 PROSPERITY FACTORS

1. Building activity.
2. Commodity prices advancing.

6. Increased production, together with market extension, by manufacturers.
7. Money plentiful.
8. More stable business conditions at home and abroad.
9. New era in economic and financial situation.

BUSINESS IN A NUTSHELL

As Observed by "Industrial Digest"

Farm Prices Rise to Peak

Although farmers have been pouring grain into the principal markets in a flood that has taxed the handling facilities of the entire country, continued demand for export and reports of the great shortages existing abroad have kept prices very strong. Reactions have come from time to time, as profit-taking developed on a large scale or bearish reports came out, but the declines have been quickly stopped and followed by rapid recoveries, frequently to new high levels. The bread grains, wheat and rye, reached new highs for the year just before the middle of November, as did the more distant deliveries of corn and oats.

Excellent Building Prospects

Instead of the ordinary seasonal slowing down in the building industry that is expected as the Fall progresses, last month showed gains in both the volume of new building planned, as indicated by permits issued and the value of contracts actually placed. It is now abundantly evident that this year's total building will run well above that of 1923, the previous record year, and that the new year will open with an unusual amount of Winter building under way.

Steel Prices Higher

Encouraged by the general business outlook as well as by continued gains in production and a fair amount of buying, steel makers are holding out for higher prices for their products. Current buying is held in check by the near approach of inventory time, but trade journals report an active interest in supplies for the first quarter of next year. With the railroads looking forward to extensive improvement work, now that investors are ready to supply funds, and with building keeping up to a very high level, two major sources of steel buying give very encouraging prospects.

Railroad Earnings Better

October railway traffic, as measured by the weekly totals of cars loaded, more than came up to expectations, with two successive weeks showing totals above the 1923 peak, while the daily average was slightly better than that of either the preceding month or October, 1923. With the September financial report showing higher net revenues than in the same month last year, it is to be expected that the October report will reveal further improvement in the financial position of the companies.

Price Level Slowly Advancing

No evidence of an inflationary movement in the prices of manufactured products is yet apparent, although the wholesale price level rose last month almost to the level of a year ago. Better prices for farm products and foods derived therefrom accounted for a very large part of the increase, with smaller increases in the textile group chiefly due to higher cotton.

space. We believe that the Administration in Washington will accomplish economy and stability."

George S. Lovejoy, president of the Massachusetts Warehousemen's Association and manager of the general storage department of the Quincy Market Cold Storage & Warehouse Co., Boston—

"Now that our elections are over, the confidence which has developed cannot but make public warehousemen feel optimistic in the future, but it will take time to get to a normal state. After the new year I expect to see business done on a larger scale."

F. R. Long, president of the Missouri Warehousemen's Association and manager of the S. N. Long Warehouse, St. Louis—

"I believe 1925 will be a record year for the warehouse business. Confidence has been restored by the recent election. All business men are taking the forward look. Farmers are enjoying increased prices and money is plentiful. We surely can look forward to increased business built on these foundations."

W. E. Martin, president of the Montana Transfer & Storagemen's Association and president of the Glendive Coal & Storage Co., Glendive—

"Glendive and Dawson County have enjoyed the best agricultural year in the past ten. No bank failures in this county. Farmers are liquidating and going in heavily for diversification to stabilize future. Jobber representatives are filling hotels. Warehouse conditions good. Territory will buy needed articles to recoup self-denial of past few years."

John Bekins, president of the Nebraska Warehousemen's Association and president of the Bekins Omaha Van & Storage, Omaha—

"Do not expect much change in warehousing business. Though the index of farm products is higher, the tendency to buy in small quantities and more frequently continues, due to increase and betterment in transportation services. I look for a decrease in household goods storage, due to increase in building."

Willard Eldredge, president of the New Jersey Furniture Warehousemen's Association and president of the Eldredge Express & Storage Warehouse Co., Atlantic City—

"The warehousing outlook in our section is very encouraging. Merchants are stocking supplies. Building is increasing. Public is responding to general feeling of increased prosperity for 1925. The warehouse industry is bound to enjoy its proportionate share of increased business, depending wholly on service rendered by various warehousemen."

R. M. King, president of the New York

SIDE GUIDE AND GRIPPER

Enlarged American Association to Cooperate with Government

Central Club Is Absorbed and Plans Are Made, on Suggestion by Department of Commerce, for Having Industry Play Its Potential Role in Country's Distribution Drama

Story of a Progressive Convention in Chicago

By KENT B. STILES

THE public warehouse industry, assured of Federal cooperation toward making its economic advantages and service more widely known in the country's distribution field, enters 1925 with an enlarged American Warehousemen's Association and with its business prospects apparently brighter than at any time during the past few years.

From the Government has come a message to warehousing to put its house in order to the end that it shall be prepared to take its rightful place "in the economic structure of distribution."

This suggestion was placed before the American Warehousemen's Association at its thirty-fourth annual convention, held at the Drake Hotel, Chicago, Dec. 8-11, by A. Heath Onthank, chief of the Domestic Commerce Division of the Department of Commerce. At the same time E. S. Gregg, head of Mr. Hoover's Transportation Division, told the delegates that other business elements do not realize warehousing's importance.

Putting warehousing's house in order—compelling the realization which Government officials say is today lacking—is the program ahead, and plans in that direction were made at the Chicago convention.

As one step, the American Warehousemen's Association expanded into an even more representative national organization by absorbing into its membership the Central Warehousemen's Club, organized seventeen years ago by forward-looking storage executives in the Mississippi Valley and symbolical of the finest in warehousing thought and progress in inland America.

As another step, the enlarged American approved a suggestion emanating from the Government that a special committee be created to work with the Department of Commerce in the Federal effort to acquaint national distributors with the economic advantages of warehouse use.

The merger of the Central with the American resulted in adoption of new by-laws for the enlarged organization, and under these the American's three divisions—merchandise, household goods and cold storage—have more autonomous identity than heretofore. In effect the three divisions become three national associations in themselves, each having its own officers, power to map out plans, funds to finance its own activities.

Under this reorganizing the association showed its confidence in its present officers by reelecting them for the new year—Gardner Poole, Boston, president; Joseph W. Glenn, Buffalo, vice-president, and C. A. Aspinwall, Washington, D. C., treasurer.

The directing board's personnel was rearranged in order to give the Central equal representation with the American, as part of the merger arrangement.

Among the subjects discussed at the convention were the Army Base situation, State regulation of the industry, advertising and publicity, freight rates, cost finding, store door delivery, field warehousing, free zones and a multitude of other problems, providing a program so filled that in the closing hours many of the discussions had to be abbreviated.

ON the opening day of the convention the two associations lost no time in getting down to the business of consolidation. At the forenoon session the Central at its seventeenth annual convention adopted a resolution setting forth "understanding and stipulations" under which it would consent to be absorbed by the American. At the afternoon session the members of the American and Central jointly voted unanimously for the merger after the American's members had accepted the resolution which the Central presented as a result of its forenoon deliberations.

Thomas J. Skellet, Minneapolis, president of the Central, opened that organization's convention with a review of the negotiations leading up to the plans for a merger and expressed opinion that the time for consolidation had come—for the welfare of the merchandise branch of the industry. He believed that national publicity and cost-finding were two subjects which could be better handled by a national organization rather than separately by two associations.

George A. Rhame, Minneapolis, C. W. C. secretary, presented his report, showing a membership of 158 companies, including three new ones during the past year.

President Skellet then called on various members to express their opinions regarding the proposed consolidation.

Roy C. Griswold, Chicago, explained that the by-laws which the A. W. A. merchandise division would prepare, if the merger went through, would in effect make the merchandise division a national association in itself, operating independently from the cold storage and household goods divisions. Mr. Griswold urged the adoption of an "enabling act" resolution authorizing, on behalf of the Central, the drawing up of such by-laws.

Talks favoring the merger plan were made by C. C. Daniel, Kansas City; F. R. Long, St. Louis; W. W. Koller, Omaha; Elmer Erickson, Chicago; W. I. Ford, Dallas, and L. C. Abbott, Fort Worth. Mr. Abbott moved the appointing of an "enabling act" committee to draw up the resolutions for which Mr. Griswold had asked, and President Skellet appointed the following committee: Mr. Griswold, chairman; Mr. Ford, Mr. Daniel, Mr. Long and W. Lee Cotter, Mansfield, Ohio.

Text of Enabling Act

This committee retired to draw up a resolution, and during its absence further viewpoints as to the suggested merger were expressed, speakers including George Hamley, Minneapolis; R. V. Weicker, Denver; Daniel P. Bray, Kansas City; C. C. Stetson, St. Paul; J. H. Cornwall, Salt Lake City; J. P. Feuling, Minnesota; Benjamin S. Hurwitz, Houston; B. L. Burke, Rock Island, Ill.; John A. Groves, Kansas City; Harry Viner, Omaha; Paul Frenzel, St. Paul; Melvin Bekins, Omaha; H. C. Goodman, Birmingham; Clarence Ullman, Peoria, Ill.; W. L. Hinds, Des Moines; Daniel Bekins, Seattle; Wellington Walker, Chicago; H. A. Pruyne and E. B. Warner, South Bend; M. W. Fay, Fort Wayne, and Knowles of Omaha, Chamberlain of Minneapolis, Niedorp of St. Joseph, Wilcox of Sioux City, Stone of Des Moines, Lamson of Minneapolis, Mills of Des Moines, Bartels of Denver, Johnson of Bloomington, Ill., and others.

The majority opinion was emphatically in favor of a merger. The opposition was founded largely on sentiment.

The "enabling act" committee brought in the following resolution:

"Be it resolved, by the C. W. C. in annual session convened, that we indorse the action of our executive committee in submitting to us a set of by-laws providing for the amalgamation and consolidation of the C. W. C. and A. W. A. as outlined by such set of by-laws heretofore submitted to our membership, with the following understanding and stipulations:

"1. That said by-laws shall be adopted by the consolidated association in lieu of existing by-laws of each association.

"2. All funds now on hand shall be apportioned to the divisions and held by such divisions in the amounts now on hand in each division. All moneys in the general fund shall remain therein.

"3. The right to reorganize separate divisions of the association, as outlined in these by-laws, is fully recognized, and that said divisions shall be in all things autonomous.

Financing a New Year

"4. That all hold-over officers of each division shall submit their resignations effective upon the reorganization of each division as contemplated in these by-laws.

"5. That the dues of each division as contemplated under this reorganization shall be an amount as now assessed in the A. W. A., and the new officers shall be authorized to assess an amount not to exceed 50 per cent of said dues for the first year's need, and thereafter the dues in each division shall be as may be adopted by such division."

This resolution was unanimously adopted, whereupon Mr. Griswold moved that the C. W. C. president appoint a committee of three, representing each the merchandise and household goods divisions—and that the A. W. A. president be requested to appoint similar committees—for effecting consolidation at the A. W. A. divisional meetings. This motion was adopted, and President Skellet appointed Mr. Griswold, chairman, and Mr. Daniel and Mr. Hurwitz to represent the merchandise interests, and Mr. Chamberlain, chairman, and Mr. Bray and Mr. Koller to represent the household goods branch.

The C. W. C. then adjourned the final convention in its history after a resolution had been adopted, on motion by Mr. Hamley, thanking Mr. Skellet for the efficiency of his administration.

Merger Effected

SHORTLY after the A. W. A. convention was under way—the general joint session with the Central—Mr. Skellet reported regarding the action the C. W. C. had taken. He likened the Central to a 17-year-old bride, and the American to a 34-year-old bachelor who should no longer be living alone, and called the coming merger a wedding.

W. W. Morse, Minneapolis, presented for adoption a set of by-laws which a consolidation committee prepared several months ago (and which was published in the December issue of Distribution & Warehousing). Mr. Morse urged that the A. W. A. adopt the by-laws in principle and that President Poole of the American appoint a committee and that President Skellet of the Central appoint a committee, the two committees to consider suggested changes in text. Mr. Poole appointed Mr. Morse and H. L. Halverson, Minneapolis; Mr. Skellet appointed R. M. Jenkins, Madison, Wis., and M. W. Fay, Fort Wayne, Ind.

While this special committee was revising the text, Roy C. Griswold, Chicago, read the "enabling act" resolution which the Central had adopted. Mr. Halverson then presented the revised by-laws, which were unanimously adopted on motion by S. M. Haslett, San Francisco. The "enabling act" resolution of the Central was adopted except that the fifth paragraph, relating to dues, was interpreted as a suggestion only, and not mandatory on the officers of the greater association.

On motion by Mr. Haslett it was voted that all C. W. C. members not already belonging to the American should become A. W. A. members automatically. Mr. Skellet moved that the two organizations were now one, and this was adopted unanimously with a rising vote and applause.

Mr. Poole's Report

PRESIDENT POOLE of the American opened the joint convention with his annual report, in which he described the past year as having been "one of accomplishment, nothing spectacular, nothing spasmodic, but a continuous effort to build upon the splendid foundation laid so many years ago."

Alluding to the simplification of forms, as approved by the Department of Commerce, Mr. Poole announced he had appointed a committee to consider the terms and conditions, which in their present text failed to receive endorsement from shippers and other interests at the Washington meeting at which the face of the forms themselves was indorsed. On this committee are, for the merchandise division, T. E. Witters of Baltimore, John L. Nichols of Boston and Sydney Smith of Chicago; for the cold storage division, W. B. Mason of Providence. R. I., Odin C. Mackay of Boston and N. A. Emmertz of Chicago.

Mr. Poole expressed opinion that the industry could "confidently look forward to the accomplishment of this committee in providing a set of terms and conditions which can be generally adopted and put into practical use" by both divisions.

Referring to the action of the publicity committee, W. Lee Cotter, chairman, in retaining a publicity representative—John M. Kirkland, New York—President Poole commented on the informative texts which Mr. Kirkland had prepared and released and said this work was beneficial to the industry. Mr. Poole added:

"Without question there is a lack of knowledge on the part of national distributors, not only as to the value of warehouse service and the advantage of spot stocks with the elimination of transportation delays and other costly annoyances, but also an ignorance and an erroneous impression regarding the percentage of cost which this service bears to the total of either items in distribution costs. It is safe to say that cost of warehousing bears a small proportionate cost and at the same time provides a service of the largest relative importance in the whole field of distribution, and without doubt any method for overcoming this ignorance must effect beneficial results, not only to warehousemen but to distributors as well."

Regarding business conditions during 1924 Mr. Poole said:

"Reports indicate that the business of the merchandise warehousemen has not been as generally satisfactory as it might have been. In some sections in the central part of the country reports are encouraging, but as a general rule business has been rather poor with houses operating on the seaboard. However, improved business conditions throughout the country now indicate that we will have a more encouraging outlook in the future with further stabilization of industry, both in this country and abroad. Our household division members report business as generally good throughout the country. The cold storage houses are finding business also generally good, with some local exceptions principally on account of excess of space and disorganized conditions."

The report by the general secretary, Charles L. Criss, Pittsburgh, showed a total membership of 524, not taking into account the merger with the C. W. C. Sixty new members were obtained during the year. A total of 52,410,200 square feet of merchandise space, 11,817,800 square feet of household goods space and 15,597,366 cubic feet of cold storage space is operated by the A. W. A. member houses, the report shows.

After reports by various general committees the convention divided into meetings of three divisions: merchandise, household goods and cold storage.

Encyclopedia—Publicity

THE report of the Central Bureau committee—T. E. Witters, Baltimore, chairman—was presented by D. L. Tilly, New York, who offered motions that the committee be authorized to publish a key making clear certain parts of the A. W. A. Encyclopedia, and to prepare a supplement containing descriptions of additional commodities and containing also the simplified forms approved by the Department of Commerce. The merchandise division granted both authorizations and approved also the committee's plan to develop the subject of warehouse distribution with particular attention to the pool car phase, with a view to recommending methods of standardized practices and determining costs of distribution.

Reporting as chairman of the publicity and advertising committee and of the public relations committee, W. Lee Cotter, Mansfield, Ohio, declared that statistics and other information regarding the industry would be necessary before a joint advertising or publicity campaign could be undertaken by the American. He told of one national distributor who has asked him to make a survey of its distribution problem, with a view to using public warehouses, and Mr. Cotter pointed out that as yet the

A. W. A. had no office or machinery to take care of such situations. "There is," the chairman said, "a vast number of distributors who are anxious for information and we must develop this field. When that commences to react, you will want to support a publicity campaign and get more new customers."

Alluding to the joint advertising campaign suggested a year ago, Mr. Cotter said that at least 20 per cent of the membership was against the plan, which precluded the committee from proceeding with the idea. The chairman commented on the increasing number of warehousing articles appearing in various business publications and to the interest by the Department of Commerce in warehousing's distribution problems, and urged the compilation of statistics as bases for future publicity and national advertising.

Army Base Resoluton

AFTER George S. Lovejoy, Boston, had reported, as chairman of division A of the committee on railroads and steamships, that the Army base situation, with regard to competition to warehousing, was generally more favorable than a year ago and that a more understanding attitude was evident on the part of Federal officials, the merchandise division at his suggestion adopted a resolution—which the association as a whole subsequently approved—reading in part as follows:

"Whereas, the Federal Government has now expressed a policy of cooperation with all branches of commercial industry for the best interests of trade and commerce and protection to privately interested capital, and

"Whereas, the Federal Government, acting through its several departments, has decided that the President's program of 'Less Government in business and more business in Government' demand a commercial use of these bases which shall not compete with private capital, and

"Whereas. leases of large portions of the Army Bases have been effected to the various Tidewater Terminal Companies at Philadelphia, Brooklyn and Boston, and

"Whereas, under the private operation of these companies there has resulted an increase in the business of the communities in which they are located, and there has been made possible a return to the Government upon capital invested, and there has not resulted any destructive competition, with private capital invested in warehouses in these cities; now, therefore be it

"Resolved, that the American Warehousemen's Association does hereby commend the action of the Federal Government in that such leases at these ports have been executed as for the best interest of the Government and the tax paying public as well as in the interest of the warehouse industry, in the firm confidence and belief that time will further establish the wisdom of such businesslike methods of protection for Government investment and upbuilding of commerce and trade of the nation. Be it further

"Resolved, that we view with interest and concern the unfortunate conditions prevailing at the ports of Norfolk and Charleston, where the Army Bases have failed to function either in the interest of the Government or the people and industry of those cities, and that we are firmly convinced that no form of Government management, either Federal or municipal, can successfully or profitably handle commerce or industry."

Wilson V. Little, Chicago, in his report as chairman of division B of the railroads and steamships committee recommended the creating of a special committee to keep in touch with various rate making bureaus and recommended that the American resume membership in the National Industrial Traffic League. He urged warehousemen to study the store door delivery problem and to take interest in the work of the Regional Advisory Boards of carriers and shippers. Maintenance of spreads between carload and less than carload freight rates, beneficial to warehousing, should continue to be advocated. Mr. Little emphasized.

Mr. Morse, presiding at the merchandise division sessions, read a letter from Alvin E. Dodd, manager of the Domestic Distribution Department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, in which Mr. Dodd urged that the association compile statistics regarding the following:

1. Number of general merchandise warehouses in the United States.
2. Square feet of floor space.
3. Character of buildings—whether fireproof or mill construction.
4. Number of motor trucks or horse trucks owned and operated by warehousemen.

The cost of such a census, Mr. Dodd believed, should be negligible if two or three warehousemen in each State would undertake to collect the facts annually, and the result would enable "the friends of warehousing to give your potential customers some knowledge of the facts with an effect upon the warehouse industry which would be immeasurable but certainly important."

Mr. Dodd expressed opinion that "nothing can interfere with the general adoption of your simplified and uniform documents."

Store Door Delivery

INTRODUCING the subject of store door delivery, Mr. Morse said he understood there was a movement on the part of the American Railway Express Co. to handle L. C. L. merchandise, and he put out the thought that the next step would be the establishing, by the express interests, of warehouses to handle such goods. He told how in western Canada there is one warehouseman in each city who handles such business, by contract with the Dominion Government or with the Canadian Pacific Railroad, other warehouse companies being barred.

C. F. B. Tippet, Toronto, explained that in eastern Canada these contracts generally go to cartage companies which are railroad subsidiaries, and that the arrangement does not benefit warehousing.

W. Lee Cotter said store door delivery would eventually be a reality and that warehousing as an industry should keep closely in touch with the situation and be prepared for it.

General discussion ensued as to whether store door delivery was favorable to the industry and there was division of opinion. Several members urged that a definite study of the problem be undertaken by the association.

The subject, "Warehouseman's liability resulting from deliveries on forged orders," was discussed by Robert L. Spencer, Pittsburgh, and W. I. Ford, Dallas. Mr. Spencer declared that a warehouseman who delivers goods on a forged order "is guilty and should be made to pay for it."

Mr. Ford believed that 95 per cent of the warehousemen today deliver goods on telephoned orders without considering their legal liability when they do that. "Your liability is exactly the same as that of a bank which cashes a forged check," he said, and he went on to quote court decisions to that effect.

There was discussion as to how general was the practice of warehousemen accepting telephoned orders and a count of hands on the floor indicated the percentage was more than 95 per cent. John L. Nichols, Boston, warned against the practice, declaring that some day warehousemen would suffer a big loss.

At this point the revised by-laws of the merchandise division were considered, as presented by a committee headed by Samuel Spear, Boston. These were adopted and decision was reached with regard to assessing additional dues should any be needed. The discussions developed that the merchandise division plans to open a secretary's office in Chicago, possibly in conjunction with the cold storage division's office in that city, and to have also a field secretary whose job in part will be to tie up the activities of the various local associations throughout the country.

The subject, "Free storage and distribution in railroad freight depots and steamship sheds," was discussed by J. Edgar Lee, Chicago, who asked that a committee be appointed to conduct a year's inquiry so that the association might be in a better position to approach the rail and water carriers. This request goes to the incoming executive committee for its consideration.

State Control

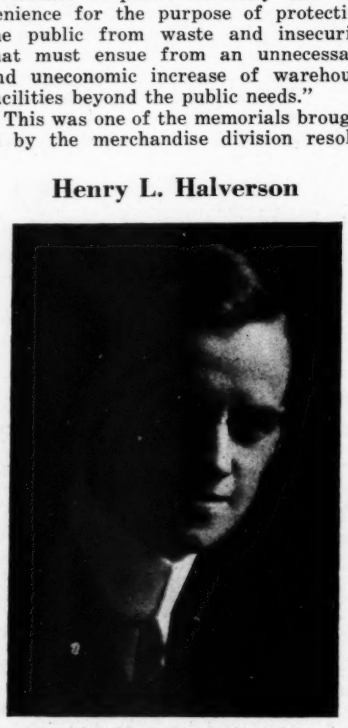

THE association went on record advocating that certificates of public necessity and convenience should be required from persons or companies setting up in the public warehouse business in States where the industry is or may in future be regulated or supervised. This action was taken under a resolution suggested by S. M. Haslett, San Francisco, reading as follows:

"Whereas, in several States, public warehouses have been declared by law to be public utilities and their rates and practices subject to regulation by State Commissions, thereby limiting their earnings to such amount as may be deemed reasonable by such Commissions, be it

"Resolved by the American Warehousemen's Association that where such regulation exists, or is created, public warehouses should receive the protection accorded to other public utilities by limiting warehouses thereafter allowed to engage in the warehouse business to such number as may be reasonably necessary to care for the storage requirements of the community, and that to that end before any additional warehouse facility shall be established it shall be required to obtain from the regulating body a certificate of public necessity and convenience for the purpose of protecting the public from waste and insecurity that must ensue from an unnecessary and uneconomic increase of warehouse facilities beyond the public needs."

This was one of the memorials brought in by the merchandise division resolutions committee, headed by W. I. Ford, Dallas, and after the merchandise division had adopted it it was placed before the whole association by Joseph W. Glenn, Buffalo, chairman of the general resolutions committee, and was approved by the larger body. The second action was taken after discussion of the subject "State control" led by Mr. Haslett and William E. Halm, New York.

Mr. Haslett described the situation in California, where the industry is regulated, and said the California warehousemen liked the law and would not change but believed that certificates of public necessity and convenience should be required to prevent fly-by-nights from operating and to avert unused space being thrown temporarily into warehousing by other industries.

Mr. Halm talked from the theoretical standpoint, as he lives in a State where warehousing is not regulated. He favored such supervision but declared that the regulating should be "something we want and not what the other fellow wants"—in other words, that warehousing should prepare wise legislation based on satisfactory provisions in the California and Minnesota statutes.

In New York, Mr. Halm said, the bankers were desirous that warehousing be placed under the State Banking Department, and he believed this would be satisfactory to New York warehousemen because that department was free from politics.

It was brought out by E. J. Tucker, Buffalo, chairman of the legislative committee of the New York State Warehousemen's Association, that at a recent meeting of the directors of that organization his committee had been instructed to prepare a regulatory bill for consideration at the next meeting of the New York association.

The subject was discussed also by William H. Parks, Springfield, Mass.; Robert L. Spencer, Pittsburgh, and Mr. Morse. The latter disclosed that at a recent meeting of the Minnesota Warehousemen's Association a committee of three had been appointed to request the State's Warehouse Commission to appoint an auditor to examine the records of all public storage companies and report any infringing of the Minnesota regulatory law; this measure had been taken, Mr. Morse explained, to protect the industry against the conversion of non-warehouse space into warehouse space by interests either not licensed to engage in warehousing, or violating the law if they were licensed.

Developing New Business

THE subject "How and where to get merchandise storage business" was led by C. C. Daniel, Kansas City, who said that, summarized, the way to get such patronage was to go after new business and not by cutting rates or taking trade away from competitors.

"Go after the potential users of warehouses," was the theme of Mr. Daniel's talk, and he urged an intensive education of such users by means of mail circulating and by national advertising. Estimating the number of such potential customers to be 30,000, Mr. Daniel outlined a plan for reaching them, as follows:

1. Compilation of a mailing list of distributors.
2. Sales copy telling of the advantages of using pubic warehouses.
3. Mailing of a circular every thirty days to the potential customers.
4. Sending the potential customers frequently a complete list of the A. W. A. membership.
5. Advertising at regular intervals in a selected list of business publications.

Mr. Daniel said he had placed the situation before a Kansas City advertising agency, which advised him that "splendid results" would come from such a campaign carried on for a year. Twelve mailings of a four-page folio to 30,000 potential customers would cost approximately $10,200 a year, not including overhead and the expense of building up the proposed mailing list, Mr. Daniel estimated, while the suggested business paper advertising would cost about $18,200 for one year. The total cost, about $28,400, would mean an expense of $175 for each member company; or $30 each if the campaign did not include the national advertising feature.

Mr. Daniel recommended that the budget and merchandise executive committees appropriate $12,000 to finance the mail circulation campaign during 1925, with members assessed pro rata as are the dues.

After some discussion which indicated that the delegates were not prepared to authorize the appropriation of such a budget at this time, Mr. Daniel offered a new motion—to the effect that it be the sense of the meeting that such a mail circulation campaign should be undertaken, with the merchandise executive committee to handle the situation. This motion was adopted.

After the election of officers, on the closing afternoon of the convention, Mr. Poole, in his talk accepting election as president for his second year, said that the standardization of basis for rates was perhaps the most constructive accomplishment in the association's history and that one of the important considerations ahead was that having to do with State control of the industry.

Mr. Poole said he favored State control if initiated by warehousemen and if free from political domination. He urged meanwhile close application to business and constant study of cost finding and, combined with these, application of the Golden Rule and adherence to a code of ethics.

During the convention addresses were made by three representatives of the Department of Commerce — E. S. Gregg, Chief of the Transportation Division; A. L. Cricher, also of the Transportation Division, and A. H. Onthank, Chief of the Domestic Commerce Division. Before the meeting was adjourned the delegates adopted a motion offered by Wilson V. Little, Chicago, that a committee be appointed to cooperate with the Department of Commerce in the latter's inquiry into the advantages of public warehousing in the scheme of distribution.

Some of the other high lights of the week in Chicago are set down elsewhere on these pages and a number of the subjects will be taken up more in detail in the February issue of Distribution & Warehousing.

HOW FREE ZONES WOULD AID STORAGE BUSINESS

THE establishing of free zones and manipulating warehouses in America, on a plane with those which exist in Europe, was made to the merchandise division by Jay Weil, New Orleans, in a paper on "The Establishment by Warehousemen of Manipulating Warehouses or Free Port Zones at the Port Cities."

If our foreign commerce is to be carried in American bottoms and if America's maritime flag is to be kept where it ought to be, Mr. Weil declared, "it is incumbent upon the commerce of the United States to develop a new branch of service consisting of the entrepot or trans-shipping business," adding:

"A manipulating warehouse, a manufacturing warehouse or a free zone—call it what you will—is what is vitally necessary on this side of the Atlantic Ocean to establish that character of seaboard distribution and through that establishment prevent the utter collapse of an American merchant marine."

Asserting that the free port idea made commercial history for the ports of Tyre, Carthage, Venice, London, Hamburg and Copenhagen, Mr. Weil explained in detail what a free zone comprises, outlined its advantages and pointed out its economic advantages from the viewpoint of the public warehouse operator.

"To the warehouseman," he said, "it means a new branch of industry, additional income from manipulation and rehandling; and a new source of storage, which would draw to the warehouse raw materials and manufactured products of every nation."

(Mr. Weil's paper will be published in full in the February issue of Distribution & Warehousing.)

On behalf of George H. Lemman, secretary of the South End Warehouse Co., San Francisco, which last June opened the country's first manipulating storage plant, Mr. Weil read a paper in which Mr. Lemman told something about this new business.

Minimizing Delay

"We think," Mr. Lemman wrote, "that it will have a tendency to increase the business of the port as its advantages become better known.

"Its chief utility, it seems to us, will be the elimination of formalities and their resulting delay in handling goods for reshipment. As trade, following the line of least resistance, is attracted to a free port, any step in that direction will be appreciated by those engaged in foreign business. Our Chamber of Commerce has shown a marked interest in the project, which would indicate that it means something of value to a port like San Francisco."

GOVERNMENT ASSURES AID FOR WAREHOUSING

THE keen interest which the Federal Government is taking in the role which public warehousing plays in America's distribution drama was manifested by the fact that three representatives of the Department of Commerce addressed the delegates.

One of these is E. S. Gregg, chief of the Transportation Division and a member of the President's Shipping Commission. Mr. Gregg recently returned from an inspection of warehouses in many cities in Europe, and at Chicago he asserted that "the American warehouses are superior—in construction and in methods of management and control."

Declaring that warehousing was a factor in distribution, Mr. Gregg suggested that a special committee be created to study this phase of the industry in cooperation with the Department of Commerce. He said that "other business elements do not realize warehousing's importance."

Before the convention closed it adopted a motion, offered by Wilson V. Little, Chicago, that a committee be appointed as suggested by Mr. Gregg.

A. Heath Onthank, chief of the Domestic Commerce Division, told the delegates that "you will probably be called upon more and more to absorb the current output of industry and to feed it out in small parcels to the wholesaler, the retailer or the manufacturer's branch store."

"Put Your House in Order"

Mr. Onthank conveyed to warehousing the message, "Put your house in order," declaring that the industry's place in the economic structure of distribution was going to be examined much more carefully in the next few years than ever before. "It's going to be," he declared, "subject to investigation by well meaning persons who are endeavoring to eliminate costs in process of distribution and who look upon warehouses as one point of attack." (Mr. Onthank's talk is published elsewhere on these pages.)

A. Lane Cricher, special agent of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, addressed the convention on the subject "Warehousing and Transportation Costs." He explained that the Bureau's Transportation Division, with which he is identified, is in cooperation with the Domestic Commerce Division, "completing its survey of the position of the merchandise warehouse in distribution, and will endeavor to present the present situation and best practices in warehousing generally." He added:

"The warehouse is closely associated with the broad and great transportation system of our nation. In the process of distributing from producer to consumer, the warehouse renders a service which has many advantages, and all of them tend to lessen the spread between producer's and consumer's prices by lessening waste in time, in transportation costs and in merchandise."

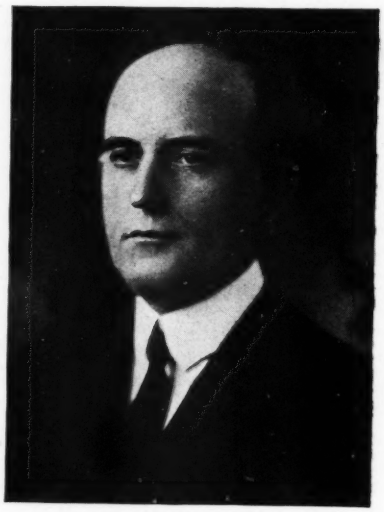

Mr. Cricher here set down ten of "these points of service," as outlined by him in detail in his paper, "The Merchandise Warehouse's Place in Present-Day Distribution," which was published in the December, 1924, issue of Distribution & Warehousing.

Arbitration Clause

Stating that the Transportation and Domestic Commerce Division of the Department of Commerce were prepared to cooperate in bringing about general adoption of standard warehousing terms and conditions, Mr. Cricher alluded to a suggestion advanced recently that an arbitration clause be included in the terms.

"This," he said, "is a constructive idea. The Department of Commerce has given its active aid to the promotion of arbitration, because commercial arbitration means conservation and economy. Whether this suggestion will be of benefit and encourage better relations in your industry I cannot say. I feel sure, however, that your thorough consideration of the commercial arbitration clause will determine its practicability in the warehouse industry. It may be that greater 'indirect transportation savings' through the inclusion of such a clause will result. The Commercial Laws Division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce is now making a world survey of commercial arbitration in all industries. Any assistance desired by your association will gladly be given."

William I. Ford

Elected a member merchandise division executive committee, American Warehousemen's Association

Referring to the "mutual benefit" stickers adopted as part of the simplified warehousing forms approved by the Department of Commerce, Mr. Cricher expressed opinion that these suggestions to shippers "will bring splendid results" and will tend to decrease loss and damage in shipments by rail. He added:

"Proper packing for domestic distribution has been investigated thoroughly by the Transportation Division. Bulletins are now in preparation which deal with this problem, and which will contain scientific analyses of the various kinds of packing."

In conclusion Mr. Cricher said:

"The warehouse industry is an integral part of our business life. It is a necessary function in present-day distribution and has to be regarded as a science in itself. The valuable service offered by this useful industry tends to minimize the high cost of getting goods to the consumer. Not least among these savings in distribution is the lessening of the costs of transportation."

Mr. Cricher interpolated his prepared address by commenting that no data exist today to show the volume of carlot distribution in connection with public warehousing — "no statistics showing what part warehousing plays definitely in distribution." It was essential that such data be compiled, he said, in the effort by the Department of Commerce to eliminate causes of economic waste.

Labor Costs

A strong plea to warehousemen to adopt labor cost systems was made to the merchandise delegates by F. R. Long, St. Louis.

By a show of hands it was learned that about 40 per cent of the warehousemen present during discussion of this subject were not using such a system.

The Function of the Warehouse in American Distribution*

By A. HEATH ONTHANK
Chief, Domestic Commerce Division, Department of Commerce

IT is somewhat trite to announce that this is an age of discoveries, but such is the case. Among other things which have been discovered, or re-discovered, is the dictionary, or certain parts of it. Changing the figure somewhat, it might be safe to say that the dictionary does business mostly in cycles: for a short time some work will be in vogue; in a few years it will be forgotten and some other word representing a pet project of that period substituted.

Coming down to our own particular interests, a word that has been gaining much favor of late years is "Distribution." Twenty years ago its sister word "Production" was all the rage, but that seems to have slipped into the limbo in favor of its more intangible and difficult companion.

One of the greatest stimulants to the increasing thought about the function of distribution was the report of the Joint Committee on Agricultural Research, issued two years ago. This was an initial attempt on a large scale to ascertain where the so-called "spread of costs" lay between the producer and the consumer.

UNDOUBTEDLY many of you are familiar with this report, but for the sake of example I wish to pick two commodities of widely different natures on which the report gave some startling information concerning the spread in prices between point of origin and point of consumption.

Many of your warehouses are used for the storage of groceries, and have handled many cases of rolled oats. It would surprise you to know that the producer of rolled oats in 1921 received only about 18 per cent of the total price paid by the public for the finished article, leaving 82 per cent of this cost to be absorbed by methods of distribution.

An almost similar case is that of corn flakes, many cases of which are undoubtedly on your floors, which had similar percentages of 21 per cent returned to the producer and 79 per cent absorbed in multifarious details connected with getting this food to the breakfast table of the consumer.

Perhaps you are not so interested in the storage of articles of clothing, but for the sake of giving you a comparison with goods of more general value, I will state the figures for men's suits which are 28 per cent to the producer and 72 per cent absorbed in distribution; and for men's shoes, on which the percentages run 38 per cent and 62 per cent.

The publication of this report burst upon the business world, as well as the public in general, like a bomb shell. It was the first tangible proof of the fact that the processes of distribution, with their thousands of charges for transportation, packing, wholesaling, retailing, storage and all the list of costs from motor trucks to telephones, were anywhere from three to four times as much as the original cost of the raw material involved.

*Address at Chicago convention of American Warehousemen's Association.

"KNOW YOUR BUSINESS!"

FROM the Government to the warehouse industry comes the following counsel as presented by Mr. Onthank, head of the Domestic Commerce Division of the Department of Commerce:

"Study your functions, your practices and your abilities from the most scientific angle which it is possible for you to conceive."

Why? Because, says Mr. Onthank:

"You will probably be called upon more and more to absorb the current output of industry and to feed it out in small parcels to the wholesaler, the retailer, or the manufacturer's branch store."

Hand-to-mouth buying by the retailer has come to stay, in the opinion of this Federal official, and he tells why in his opinion this will lead to wider use of the public warehouse by the manufacturer.

At the same time this inquiry was going on business, as is its wont, was taking steps of its own accord to remedy some of these excessive charges.

You are all familiar with the phenomenal growth of the chain store movement in almost every branch of trade in the past ten years, and particularly since the war. This is, undoubtedly, one of the most potent answers to the question of how distribution costs are to be lowered. That growth has been phenomenal for the very reason that the field was prepared for the planting of this relatively new type of retail outlet.

A second significant novelty in the field of distribution has been the growth of practice of selling through itinerant vendors. In the old days these men were known as "peddlers," and the only modern difference is that they are now organized into large companies which cover the country through branch offices and district sales managers, each in charge of large crews of men going from house to house to market the particular product handled.

Both of these new movements are protests from within business itself against the excessive cost of distributing goods to the ultimate consumer.

Yet a third movement, again from within business and this time directed toward channels of distribution as they already exist, is seen in the widespread emphasis for an increase of stock-turn by the retailer.

And of all these three factors tending toward the reduction of cost in distribution I take it that none is more interesting to the warehousing industry than the last.

Let me go back a few years to trace in a little more detail the origin of the present feverish agitation for an increased rate of turnover in the retail trade.

There is no need to point out to you the bad effects of the depression which followed the boom period after the war. Your own business undoubtedly showed it sharply, as did all industry and commerce throughout the world. You are furthermore familiar with the fact that stocks of goods had piled up in the hands of wholesalers and retailers to an alarming extent, so that the ordinary flow of manufactured merchandise was greatly impeded.

From this period the retailer learned a lesson which he will not soon forget. The immediate result was that he changed his methods of buying from ordering in large quantities sufficient to fill needs for several months ahead to what has been called "hand-to-mouth buying."

There is no need to take up at this time the question of whether hand-to-mouth buying has been a good or bad influence. Recently the manufacturers have become alarmed at the continuance of this policy on the part of the retailer, and have inveighed against it in no uncertain terms.

I believe that whatever its merits or defects, some sort of purchasing for quick turnover is here to stay. The retailer, and to some extent the wholesaler, forced into this measure of purchasing for short time needs by the dire necessity of a period of depression, soon came to see that his old way of purchasing two or three years' supply of matches, for instance, in order to gain a discount of 10 or 15 per cent, was a questionable one. He began to take heed of the measures which had been advocated for a long time by the most progressive merchants—which were aimed at a quick turnover and the minimum of stock in the store room and upon the shelves necessary for the proper conduct of business. He was not in the least deterred from his policy in the fact that his competitors, the chain stores, based their whole theory of business upon small stocks and quick turnover.

New Form of Distribution

In a word, the retailer has finally seen the light, and I doubt very much whether he will go back to his old methods of purchasing except under the stress of another boom period with its wild scramble for stock of any sort and its nefarious system of duplication of orders which later may be cancelled at any moment.

That being the case, we must recognize that a new method of distribution is with us.

The retailer will in the future call upon the wholesaler for supplies of canned goods or shoes or hammers not once or twice a year but on the basis of a carefully planned budget of sales and purchases by which he places an order every month if not oftener.

The wholesaler, faced with the fact that he needs a smaller stock to care for the lessened demands of the retailer, will cut down his purchases in bulk.

But the manufacturer appears to be left holding the bag.

The question which confronts the manufacturer today is closely allied to services of the warehousing industry. So far as manufacturing processes are concerned, they can be changed but little because they have been brought to the most scientific state which years of study could produce.

The industries which manufacture for seasonal demand will be especially hard hit by the fact that the wholesaler and retailer are not buying as in the good old days but are spreading their purchases over the whole year.

What then is the manufacturer to do?

Is he to increase his plant at considerable expense by the erection of his own storehouse, thus tying up capital which might well be used to finance his current purchases of raw materials?

Or is he to turn to the warehousemen as his partner?

In the long run he will probably decide to use the mercantile warehouse, and here, gentlemen, you come into the picture in a very clearcut and vivid manner. With the exception of the periods of boom in business to which I have formerly alluded, you will probably be called upon more and more to absorb the current output of industry and to feed it out in small parcels to the wholesaler, the retailer, or the manufacturer's branch store.

May I make specific mention of one particular line to which your attention should be called? Along with this greatly increased interest in methods of production has gone a tremendous change in methods of advertising. A look at the advertising copy in the popular magazines of today and those of ten or fifteen years ago is all that is needed to convince any person of that fact. The craze for slogans which has swept the country in the past few years is only one indication of a desire for national advertising on the part of many industries. More and more companies are placing their products on a nationally advertised basis and more and more nationally advertised goods are going through our warehouses.

A BUSINESS TIP

A CONSTRUCTIVE thought which perhaps has never occurred to the average warehouseman is offered by Mr. Onthank in this convention speech. It relates to national advertising by industries with products to sell—and how warehousing ought to capitalize on such advertising.

By keeping in contact with the advertising fraternity, Mr. Onthank suggests, warehousing could place itself in position to plan shipments, give better service to retailers and customers, and effect a more orderly process of marketing—all concurrently with national advertising campaigns conducted by producers.

Tie Up with Advertising

In spite of the injunctions of the advertising men that advertising should be carried on constantly and not in starts and spurts, we still have with us the manufacturer who is not able to afford or who does not wish for some other reason to advertise constantly but conducts his advertising campaign in bursts.

It should be apparent in the new state of affairs that when a national campaign is to be inaugurated or to be reintroduced, the warehouses all over the country should carry large amounts of the product to be marketed.

One way in which you warehousemen can increase your efficiency and service for the public good is to work more closely with the advertising fraternity who has planned out these campaigns and who do not see perhaps the emphatic need for having the warehouses supplied with plenty of the product advertised at the time the advertising campaign is opened in all its glory upon an unsuspecting public.

This closer contact should result in better planning of shipments, better service to the retailer and to his customers, and so far as disposition goes a more orderly process of marketing.

There is no question but that the place of the warehouse in the economic structure of distribution is going to be examined much more carefully in the next few years than ever before. It is going to be subject to investigation by well meaning persons who are endeavoring to eliminate costs in process of distribution and who look upon warehouses as one point of attack. May I leave with you then one admonition which I look upon as being for your own interest as well as that of the public: "Put your house in order?"

By that I do not mean to say that any bad practices are present or have been present but I do mean that you should study your functions, your practices and your abilities from the most scientific angle which it is possible for you to conceive.

Wanted: Facts!

If the whole trend of endeavor in distribution is to be economy, that particular phase should concern you no less, and possibly much more. At the present time the business and general public has no basis to judge of your efficiency and operations. There is no set of facts which can be pointed out as justifying your demand for greater use of the warehouses to cut down costs and to increase service.

I believe that one of the first jobs you have at hand is the scientific analysis of your present abilities from the point of view of efficient handling of merchandise to go with a well conceived plan for future expansion which will care for the ever changing methods of distribution to the ultimate consumer.

May I recommend further that if this is to be done, as I sincerely hope, it should not be done on a basis of a house divided against itself but should be made to include the interests of every warehouse, merchandise or cold storage, in the whole country. It is only through the unanimous opinions that you can carry your story to the country in any convincing manner.

If these two suggestions are taken under serious consideration with a result of definite action, I look to see the warehouse industry continue and enlarge its true place in American commerce as one of the chief aids to the country's welfare and, furthermore, one which has the recognition and the approbation of the great American business public.

Shall the Warehouseman Lease Space When Storage Business Is Poor?*

By C. W. McDONALD

Secretary-Treasurer, Railway Terminal & Warehouse Co., Chicago

IN the business of warehousing the principal commodity we have to sell is of course our space, and it is of course our business to sell it to the best possible advantage. If we could be sure that our houses were going to be filled to capacity, or nearly so, practically all of the time with a good class of general storage business it is not likely that much of the space would be sold on a long term lease, as we could doubtless make a larger profit from the general storage business; but we know from past experience that business conditions change rapidly and a good year may be followed by a lean one.

FOR instance, there are at times accounts who have such a large variety of merchandise, sizes and brands that it is thought no one but their own men can handle the orders without a lot of mistakes and confusion, but if you show them how they can lease a certain amount of space in your warehouse and have their own employees on the premises to handle the orders, etc., you can often do business with them on a space or lease basis.

Then again there are certain accounts which, because of many varieties, marks and brands and vast amount of detail work and loss of piling space, you do not want on a general storage basis, because even with the addition of certain penalties exacted by certain rules you are still unable to make a storage rate high enough to enable you to make a profit on the account without scaring the customer away; but he will often be willing to lease a certain amount of space and pay for the handling of his goods in and out on a time basis.

From the standpoint of a tenant requiring from 1,000 up to 25,000 feet of floor space there are many advantages to be obtained from leasing space in a warehouse as against having his own building or space in a building used for other than general storage purposes. The amount of space is more flexib'e and as his business grows he can take on additional space as required wthout expense for moving into a larger building. Some of our tenants have started out with a small amount of space and have increased it to several times the original space.

He is relieved of the expense and annoyance of operating a heating plant, maintaining elevators, employing a watchman, etc., as, of course, all of these services are furnished by the warehousemen and included in the rent. If the warehouse is served by several elevators he can be reasonably sure of elevator service at any and all times, whereas if he is in a small building with only one elevator he is very apt to be up against it sooner or later when that elevator goes out of commission.

The tenant has the advantage also of being able to get the use of part of our organization at times if he wants to get a man or two for maybe a couple of hours or a day during a temporary rush of business, and he is always glad to pay us a little profit and get a man or men who are experienced in handling merchandise rather than to take a chance on men who are picked up on the street or through an employment agency.

This also enables us to carry a larger permanent organization than would otherwise be possible through a season when general storage business is slack.

With a considerable portion of the space in a large house leased to responsible tenants you are assured of a reasonable return on at least a portion of your space, and the amount of space available for general storage business is reduced accordingly, and therefore the temptation to go out and slash rates in order to get enough business to keep your head above water is also reduced accordingly.

There are many accounts that can be interested in a warehouse proposition on a lease of space basis that you cannot interest on the general storage basis.

IF YOU ARE GOING TO LEASE

HERE are some business hints for the warehouseman who is considering selling some of his space on a long term lease when the storage year is a lean one.

This practice of leasing space has been in Chicago "a life-saver for some of us during the past three years when general storage business has been rather scarce," according to Mr. McDonald—and he tells what the storage executive should do and should not do in developing this particular phase of warehousing.

The tenant is also relieved of a lot of detail work in connection with locating cars and arranging to have them set in on a switch-track, etc., as all of that work is, of course, handled through our office.

In negotiating with a prospective tenant there are many other arguments that can be presented in favor of taking space in a warehouse as against having a small building for his exclusive use; and it is sometimes a good plan to figure out for him the total cost per foot of floor space in his own building, after adding to his fixed charges for rental or investment the additional items of heating, which includes coal, pay of man who has it in charge, expense of removing ashes, boiler repairs and replacements, boiler explosion insurance, etc.; and the expense of maintaining elevators, which includes cost of power, repairs and replacements, insurance, etc.; and the cost of a watchman, and any other items of expense that occur to you. In this way you can often show him where it is greatly to his advantage to take the space you are offering at a fair price and then he will know exactly what it is going to cost him.

If he is considering a small building that has been offered to him at maybe 20 or 25 cents per foot per year, you can generally show him where the actual cost, including the various items mentioned, is going to be up around 50 or 60 cents or more per foot; and then if the price at which your space is offered appears to be reasonable he will begin to do some thinking and figuring and you have a good chance to land him at a price that will give you a reasonab'e profit.

We have space leases running from 1.000 to 30,000 square feet of floor space. The larger tenants generally take an entire room or two rooms. Our rooms average around 15,000 square feet, and, of course, the smaller tenants only have a certain space in a room, sometimes separated from the balance of the room by a partition or a wire fence, although sometimes there is no partition at all.

If the tenant handles a class of goods that is not liable to be pilfered he generally does not care for a partition, nor do we; but if he wants to have his space partition we generally permit him to put in such a partition as he wants at his own expense, but, of course, we insist that it be so erected that it will not increase the rate of insurance on the building or contents and it must, of course, conform to the requirements of the city, etc.

Figuring the Rental Price

In negotiating a lease of space you can base your rental price on either gross or net measurement and in quoting a price the basis should be specifically stated, especially if you are quoting on basis of gross measurement.

Our leases are generally negotiated on basis of gross space. We, of course, know the gross area of our building and also the net area after deducting space for walls, elevators, stairways and vestibules; and assuming for the purpose of illustration that the gross area is 25 per cent more than the net area, then you would measure up the space that you propose to lease and add 25 per cent to cover its proportionate share of space for walls, elevators, stairways, etc. If, however, the space you are leasing does not include trucking aisles, you would probably have to add about 50 per cent to cover the total.

These percentage figures are, of course, used only for the purpose of illustration and vary according to different buildings; this is something that each warehouseman can readily determine in his own case.

If the space to be rented is a small one, say between the wall and one of your regular trucking aisles, it is customary to measure out to the center of the trucking aisle that serves the space to be leased.

There are one or two things I particularly want to call to your attention in connection with the leasing of space, and the first is to consider what portion of your facilities, such as trackage, elevator and delivery platform, the lessee will require.

If his business is of such a nature that he will require the constant use of a greater proportion of your facilities than his space bears to the total space of your building, you should make your rental figure high enough to compensate therefor. You can usually form a good idea of what facilities will be required from the nature of the business, and the prospective tenant can usually tell you the approximate number of cars he handles per month and about how many deliveries he averages per day.

I mention this because in many cases the facilities for unloading cars and loading wagons, etc., are not as good as they might be, and it would be a mistake to take in a tenant who would require more than you are in a position to give him.

If your track facilities are limited it is well to have a provision in your lease under which you can force tenant to unload or load his cars without delay, and our leases usually contain something to the effect that if he does not do so after reasonable notice we can unload the car and deliver the goods to his space and make a charge against him for the service. In some leases we have a definite arrangement under which we do all of the unloading of tenant's cars and deliver the goods to his space, and he, of course, pays us for the service, usually on what we term a time basis.

It occasionally happens that a prospective tenant will want to have an office in connection with his space, or at least in the same building. During the past few years we have built a considerable number of offices in one of our buildings, mostly for use of brokers and others who do more or less business with us on general storage basis, although some of them are rented to parties who also lease considerable portions of warehouse space. However, if the prospective tenant wants an office in the building with his space and we haven't got one that is suitable, we generally suggest that he can easily build such an office as he requires at his own expense, as he can then have it just as cheap or elaborate as he wishes.

In a preliminary talk with a prospect it is well to mention that all of your space is not held at the same price. For instance, if he requires main floor space the rental therefor is considerably higher than for space on one of the upper floors, because that main floor space is of more value to you for your general storage business; then again certain spaces immediately adjacent to the elevators are more valuable on the upper floors than are spaces where there is a long trucking distance.

In drawing up a lease for a small amount of space it is well also to have a clause under which you will be permitted to move the tenant to some other part of the warehouse, at your expense, where he will have equal facilities as to light, elevator, etc., providing in your opinion it should be desirable to change his location for any reason.

Insurance an Argument

In the case of my own company we have tried as much as possible to consolidate several small tenants in one room rather than to have them spread all through the building and we believe this is a good general plan to follow.

In addition to the other arguments heretofore mentioned that can be used in negotiating with a prospective tenant, it might be mentioned that insurance rates are usually lower in warehouses as of course the modern houses are generally equipped with a sprinkler system; watch service boxes that must be pulled at regular intervals by the watchman, and all of these items are of course considered by the insurance companies when making their rates.

Another point that it is well to have a definite understanding about, especially with the smaller tenants, is as to whether you are to furnish the tenant with hand trucks or if he is to provide his own. If you supply the trucks it will sometimes happen that the tenant will want to use a lot of them just when you want them and what may seem to him to be reasonable use may appear to you to be unreasonable use, especially if he is in the habit of loading up a lot of them and keeping them out of commission for some time so he will be in position to make a quick delivery when his teamster arrives for a load.

Character of Occupancy

As a general rule it is well to have it understood that the tenant will furnish his own trucks but of course if you are in position to accommodate him at times without inconvenience, that is something that can generally be worked out between you on a give and take basis.

There are possibly some hazards brought about through leasing of space and these of course must be guarded against as much as possible.

You should know in advance what class of goods your prospective tenant expects to handle and whether his occupancy will increase insurance rates, or cause damage to other goods through the emission of odors, or damage other goods on the lower floors through leakage.

It occasionally happens that the employees of a tenant will pilfer goods that are in storage near the leased space, and sometimes they will smoke in a place where it is not permitted; but in an experience covering a period of nearly fifteen years we have had but very little trouble of this kind and as a rule the man in charge of your tenant's operations on the premises is just as anxious to have his employees honest and just as anxious to do everything reasonably possible to avoid fires as you are.

I have tried in a general way to bring out some of the possibilities for warehouse revenue from leasing space and to cover some of the things that I think should be considered in connection with the subject and if the information I have tried to convey has given any man in this room one new idea that he can use to advantage I will feel amply repaid for my efforts.

Confidence

The merchandise men enjoyed one of the little philosophical talks for which John L. Nichols, Boston, has made himself famous at convention, his subject this time being "How to bring about confidence in each other among warehousemen."

Mr. Nichols declared that 75 per cent of America's warehousemen were more worthy of confidence today than they were six years ago. He emphasized the value of developing friendships with competitors. Summarized, his theme was that "the way to inspire confidence is to have confidence."

Should Labor Be Paid by Day or Ton for the Handling of Merchandise?*

By WILLIAM E. HAGUE
President, Merchandise Storage Co., Columbus, Ohio

IN these days of keen competition and ever increasing costs of living it is only natural that each of us should attempt to widen the margin between revenue and costs in order to increase profits. The warehouseman's chief expenses are rentals, in one form or another, and labor.

Interest charges and rentals are fairly stable, but with mostly an upward tendency that only makes our task increasingly more difficult, while labor is to some extent governed by supply and demand.

Now the warehouseman has two principal sources of revenue—space and service.

The first, as we have said, is bounded within fixed or practically fixed limits, while the second, service or labor, is less rigid, is governed by an entirely different set of principles, and therefore appears to offer a better opportunity to accomplish the desired result, i. e., widening the margin between cost and revenue.

It has therefore been suggested that this can, in part at least, be accomplished by paying labor on a tonnage basis rather than by the day or hour; that through such a plan labor will, by eliminating waste and lost motion, increase its efficiency to a point where more tonnage will be handled in a given length of time and in which increase the laborer will share with his employer.

WITHOUT wishing, at this time at least, to inflict my personal opinions on you, let us proceed to a dispassionate discussion of the relative merits of the two methods, and in doing this I shall not confine myself to personal experience, but will include that of others with whom I have talked and corresponded.

In practically every case, the purpose of changing from the day rate to tonnage basis has been for the sole purpose of reducing costs per ton, or an attempt to do so and with the idea that such a plan would prove successful; there are, however, those who think any change from established rules is progress, and therefore the age-old method of pay by the day is antiquated and should be supplanted by the tonnage method of compensation.

It would be interesting to know how many executives in this room actually know in dollars and cents per ton what their labor costs are to unload and stow a car of corn flakes, flour, sugar, canned goods, wire fencing, newsprint, roofing, or any or all of the many commodities that go into the public storehouse of today. There have been volumes issued by associations and groups of warehousemen telling us what it should be, and column upon column in trade papers giving figures and alleged facts with some particular experience as a basis, and please understand that I am sure most of the authors of the writings referred to knew their subject as it related to themselves or the operations investigated, but we should not, under any circumstances, take such data as the final basis for establishing our own costs, but should dig into the internals of our own plant and be able every day to tell just exactly what our cost per ton is.

*Address at Chicago convention of American Warehousemen's Association.

NOT "HOW" BUT "WHAT"

THE laborer who handles merchandise in the warehouse should be paid by the day, not by the ton, in the opinion of Mr. Hague, who here goes into detail in presenting his arguments favoring the day-pay plan and opposing the ton-pay system.

"What really counts," Mr. Hague says in conclusion, "is not HOW we compute the laborer's wage, but WHAT HE RETURNS for the pay, and not HOW many cents per ton it costs to handle a given commodity, but WHAT PERCENTAGE of the revenue it costs."

For after all, each must make his profit in and through his own business, and in no way can a profit be had except to operate for less than the revenue derived therefrom.

Until one knows, then and not before, has any one a right to say which method is preferable. In fact, until one knows, not in a vague general way, but absolutely beyond the question of a doubt, what his present cost per ton equals, has any one the proper foundation upon which to build an argument for or against either method, both of which, my investigation convinces me, have virtues, and both have faults.

The "per day or per hour" method is probably more generally used than any other, and I am inclined to the opinion that such is the case for other reasons than the fact that it has nearly always been so. I believe the "pay by day" has more virtues than faults and the "pay by tonnage" more faults than virtues.

Under the tonnage plan the workman's wages fluctuate with, of course, always a minimum, which is generally less than the current day rate; this is essential if any speeding up is to be accomplished. It is usually difficult to get men accustomed to the tonnage plan —largely, I think, because it is new to most of them, is untried, and they immediately think it is another scheme of the boss to get more work for less pay, which of course it isn't.

The men really worth while are those with responsibilities and dependents and who are naturally loth to take a chance on receiving less than they have been accustomed to making.

Now if we had one commodity or group of commodities to handle, between nearly fixed points, our problem would be comparatively simple and more than likely advantageously worked out, but with a hundred different items varying from flaked cereals to pig lead and trucked to points a few feet or many yards and from the basement to the top floor, the man who expects to compute a tonnage basis of pay and at the same time be always fair to his employees as well as himself, has picked out a big job and a complicated one.

I know of a number of instances where the tonnage plan is employed; in each case, however, the rate paid truckers is the same regardless of commodity or distance, with the frequent result that the old men on the job and the foreman's favorites get the short haul heavy items while the greener gets the light, bulky, long walk and the high piling. This sooner or later breeds dissatisfaction and discontent among the men, which none of us can afford to have.

In one case a very elaborate system of rates was used, which were about as nearly equitable to all as it seems possible to make them; the system was not devised overnight but was an evolution of months in perfecting. This company, with approximately fifteen to eighteen employees affected, required the full time of one man and part time of another, successfully to operate the system and compute the payroll each week. After a trial of four years they concluded the increased efficiency did not justify the extra cost and effort, and returned to the "day pay" plan, without raising costs and to the immense satisfaction of their employees.

Broom Pushers

To those of you who pay by tons at a fixed price per ton, I ask, do you receive the same price per ton on everything? Certainly you do not, and you do not because it costs more to handle some items than it does others. That being true, why then should you expect or ask your employees to do for you that which you will not do for your principal?

Again, around every warehouse there are from time to time other things to be done than load and unload cars; who is to perform these tasks? Can you rightfully expect the tonnage employee to push a broom during idle moments or will you carry on your payroll a group of specialists in this fine art and another crew to rearrange, repile, etc.?

It is a very different situation that confronts the warehouseman than that which the shoe manufacturer, the automobile builder, or foundryman, has to meet, so we cannot look to them for guidance. Who then may we look to? Probably the nearest approach to our business is the railroads, which haul not only every item we handle, but many more and with their representatives I have had a number of meetings, asking many questions, which were cheerfully answered.

At this point a few facts and figures may help to enlighten:

At one freight station where tonnage pay is in effect, I find the average trucking distance inbound 163 feet, outbound 35 feet, the type of labor about equally divided between foreign and negroes; the rate of pay from house to car or car to house 32c. per ton; on transfer freight—that is, car to car—34.14c. per ton, this increase because of longer haul. Each gang is composed of 5 men, 3 truckers, 1 picker and 1 check clerk. The guarantee to laborers is 49c. per hour; to caller or picker, 51c. per hour; and to check clerk, 53c. per hour.

Therefore, to earn more than the minimum wage of $3.92 for truckers, $4.08 for pickers and $4.24 for checkers, each gang must handle 61 tons in 8 hours or 3050 lb.—a trifle over 1½ tons per man per hour.

Excess tonnage is paid on the same basis, but is divided somewhat differently, the check clerk receiving 35 per cent, caller, 33.1 per cent, and the truckers sharing equally in 31.9 per cent.

The argument for this apparent unequal division is to encourage the checkers and pickers to speed up the truckers. Just how successful this has been is indicated by the fact that during the month of October, with no lack of tonnage to handle, the average was one and two hundredths tons per man per hour. Only on two days did the men reach or exceed the minimum, and on those days the merchandise was of so heavy a character they could not help themselves; therefore, being satisfied with the minimum wage, they made no effort to earn more.

During the same period the average cost per ton was 52c. for a one-way truck, No warehouseman can pay such a rate and long exist.

However, some warehousemen do pay by tonnage and with somewhat better results. I went exhaustively into the subject with an ardent advocate of the tonnage plan, to find out that he, too. operates in 5-men gangs—4 truckers and a check clerk. The minimum pay for truckers is $3.60 and for check clerk $5.10 per 9-hour day, in place of the 8-hour day as in the case of the railroads. The average tonnage per man hour must reach 1.5 tons to equal minimum wage; therefore, if each man does his part and the gang handles its quota, the minimum tonnage cost is 26⅔c. per ton. Mind you, that is the absolute minimum, not even the average nor by any means the maximum.

On excess tonnage the rate is 22½c. per ton. That though, is meaningless, as it is not used often enough to make any difference, which is proved by the fact that for the year 1923 his average cost slightly exceeded 50c. per ton. With every ton to be handled twice, in and out, his handling cost exceeded a dollar—more than most of us receive on much of our merchandise.

However, the figures of railroads and privately owned warehouses are near enough together to check and we think form a reasonably correct idea of what is to be expected under the tonnage payment plan.

For the other side, the old-fashioned employers who still pay by the hour or day, we find this:

A Railroad Example

A railroad operation approximating the one above, except that the average trucking distance is 50 feet inbound against 35 feet and outbound 384 feet against 163 feet—each case about 40 per cent longer. However, the tons per man hour are, inbound, slightly over one ton and, outbound, slightly over two tons, the average being almost a half-ton better than the tonnage pay freight house although nearly half again as far to truck.

Under day pay plan there exists no tendency on the part of men to "floor freight" unnecessarily in order to "pick up" again for a second credit. There is in every freight house as well as warehouse, occasion when it is necessary to "floor freight." In the railroad case this runs about 4 to 6 per cent of gross tonnage, but in spite of this double handling railroad No. 2 is handling freight for 42c. per ton against 52c. in the first instance, where 1 ton "floored freight" is computed on the pay roll as 2 tons although but 1 ton on revenue report.

A railroad operation that went from day rate to tonnage and then, after two years' trial, back to day rate, says, "Never again on tonnage plan for them"—that during the tonnage system they averaged 3 exceptions per car, and once back to the day rate the exceptions dropped to 1 to each three and a fraction cars. In other words, the errors in loading were ten times greater under the tonnage plan than under the day rate plan; moreover, damage claims dropped from 1½ per cent to 64/100 of 1 per cent.

Shipments in Wrong Cars

The explanation for these savings in errors and damage are, first: having no personal gain at stake, the truckers sought out the correct car, even though it took a minute or two longer to find it; and, second: for the same reason, the merchandise was more deliberately and carefully handled.

Shipments loaded in wrong cars cause delays in delivery, double hauls and handling, as well as dissatisfied customers. While damage claims cost money, both reduce net revenue by increasing handling expense, and this saving alone would justify the railroads in sticking to day rate at a higher cost per ton, although their experience is and has been a saving of nearly 20 per cent in handling while operating upon the day pay basis. I might say, too, that the last railroad referred to hires only American white labor who can read and write and pays straight time of 49c. per hour, working an 8-hour day, with time and a half for overtime. Their tonnage figures given include some overtime, though not a great deal.

At a warehouse of approximately the same area as the other, but of different type and construction — if anything, a more expensive operation, from an operative standpoint—over a period of a year the labor costs per ton averaged inbound 24c., outbound 30c., or a total of 54c. for the round trip; this is 3c. per ton more than either of the foregoing tonnage examples paid for one way. The average tonnage per man hour was 2.1 tons—34 per cent greater than required under tonnage plans to earn minimum.

Now, why, I asked this man, do you get more tons per hour than the others who pay by ton? This is his answer:

"We pay a little above the average wage and employ only white American labor, our wage being 55c. per hour, and we guarantee a 50-hour week. If a man is sick and goes home early we do not stop his pay the moment he walks out the door. We pay for holidays. We carry group insurance and pay the premium ourselves; not a penny of it is paid by the men. We favor them in other ways whenever possible or consistent with our own interests. In this way we get better, more reliable men—men who appreciate permanent places and know that to retain them they must render an hour's effort for an hour's pay."

Distinction Between Sections 2 and 3 of Interstate Commerce Act

Confusion Regarding "Unreasonable Prejudice" and "Unjust Discrimination" Is Here Clarified

By Lincoln T. Bradley

ONE of the worst stumbling blocks for traffic managers in various industries is the misunderstanding and confusion which has arisen over the essential difference between Sections 2 and 3 of the Interstate Commerce Act. Apparently this misunderstanding is due largely to the tendency to confound the terms "undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage" and "unjust discrimination" and to treat these terms at all times as synonymous and interchangeable.

In view of this, it is thought a brief résumé of these differences may help to clear misunderstanding and be of decided benefit to many traffic managers, as well as many executives in transportation systems.

The object in view in detailing the facts set forth is to show that Section 2 relates primarily to inequalities between shippers in the same locality, chiefly in the nature of concessions, over the same road, to the same destination, under similar circumstances and into which the question of competition does not enter. Rebates, generally speaking, may be said to be things of the past and it would be a rare instance which would arise in these days calling for the Commission to ascertain if Section 2 had been violated.

While it will be observed that Section 2 has a rather limited application, the scope of Section 3 is broad enough to cover all forms of preference or prejudice. Section 3 makes it unlawful for any interstate common carrier to make or give any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any particular person, company, firm, corporation or locality, or any particular description of traffic to any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage.

PROFESSOR DRINKER, in his book on the Interstate Commerce Act, states that Section 2 evidently was aimed at prevailing discrimination among individuals by means of rebates; further, that Section 2 does not cover all kinds of favoritism among individuals, but refers only to discrimination charges and leaves it to Section 3 to forbid the giving of all other sorts of advantages.

One of the earliest cases the Commission had before it involving Section 2 is known as the "Party Rate Case." The Commission held in this proceeding that it was an unjust discrimination to maintain party rate tickets for transportation of ten or more persons for a lower rate than for the transportation of one.

The Supreme Court (145 U. S. 263) reversed the Commission, construing Section 2 in its application to this case as follows:

"In order to constitute an unjust discrimination under Section 2 the carrier must charge or receive directly from one person a greater or less compensation than from another, or must accomplish the same thing indirectly by means of a special rate, rebate or other device; but in either case it must be for a 'like and contemporaneous service in the transportation of a like kind of traffic, under substantially similar circumstances and conditions.' To bring the present case within the words of this section we must assume that the transportation of ten persons on a single ticket is substantially identical with the transportation of one and, in view of the universally accepted fact that a man may buy, contract or manufacture on a larger scale cheaper proportionately than upon a small scale, this is impossible."

VARIOUS Court decisions have indicated clearly the difference between two of the Interstate Commerce Act sections—2 and 3—having to do with "undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage" and "unjust discrimination."

The phraseology and meaning of these sections and Congress's intent in enacting them, frequently confuse industrial traffic managers and other transportation executives.

This article was written by Mr. Bradley to clarify.

Among other undisputed facts proved in evidence in the Wright case (167 U. S. 512) were these:

During the year 1892 F. H. Bruening was engaged in the business of a wholesale beer dealer in Pittsburgh and purchased his beer in Cincinnati. Bruening's place of business was situated on the "Pan-handle" in Pittsburgh. The rate from Cincinnati to his warehouse on a private siding was 15 cents per 100 pounds. The station of the B. & O. R. R. Co. in Pittsburgh was some distance from Bruening's warehouse, so if Bruening shipped his beer from Cincinnati by the B. & O. it was necessary to wagon-haul it to his warehouse. The rate of the B. & O. between the two points was likewise 15 cents per hundred.

The B. & O. made an arrangement with Bruening that if he would ship his beer via that line it would make the same delivery at the door of his warehouse as made by the "Pan-handle"; that is to say, the B. & O. would haul the beer from its station to his warehouse without extra charge.

Afterward it was found that the cost to the railroad for hauling was 3½ cents per 100 pounds and that Bruening offered to do the hauling himself for that price and that his offer was accepted.

Bruening made many shipments by the B. & O., paid the charge of 15 cents per hundred on delivery, and at the end of each month presented and collected a bill for 3½ cents per 100 pounds for hauling.

During the continuance of the arrangement the Kaufman Brewing Co. of Cincinnati made several shipments of beer via the B. & O. to Pittsburgh, consigned to Kaufman Brewing Co., care of or notify Henry Wolf, Pittsburgh, to order of shipper at fifth class rate, 15 cents per hundred. Henry Wolf was a wholesaler at Pittsburgh, located near the B. & O. station and without track connection to any railroad, hauling beer to his warehouse at his own expense.

In this case criminal proceedings were brought against Wright under Sections 2 and 10 of the Interstate Commrece Act. Section 10 makes it a misdemeanor to violate any of the provisions of the Act. It is apparent that the B. & O. granted a rebate to a shipper located on a competitive line to secure the traffic. The Supreme Court said:

"It was the purpose of this section to enforce equality between shippers and it prohibits any rebate or other device by which two shippers, shipping over the same line, the same distance, under the same circumstances, are compelled to pay different charges therefor."

In Richmond Chamber of Commerce v. S. A. L. Ry., 44 L. C. C. 455 et seq., it developed that it was the practice of certain carriers serving Richmond to absorb switching charges only when the switching line competed with the line-haul carrier, while refusing to absorb such charges when the switching line did not compete with the line-haul carrier.

The Commission's opinion found this constituted undue discrimination within Section 2. Citing the principles underlying the Wright case as controlling, the Commission finds:

"Section 2 is primarily directed against discrimination between shippers located in the same community. It is aimed to put all shippers within a switching district upon a substantial equality. It provides that, where a carrier receives from any person a greater compensation for any service rendered than it receives from any person for doing him a 'like and contemporaneous service in the transportation of a like kind of traffic under substantially similar circumstances,' such common carrier shall be deemed guilty of unjust discrimination, a discrimination which is prohibited and declared to be unlawful. Under this section it is settled that the competition of rival carriers as such does not constitute substantially dissimilar circumstances to justify a difference in treatment."

A Lumber Case

In the Pacific Lumber case, 51 LCC 738, 750, the Commission states:

"While a state of facts which would show an undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage under Section 3 of the Act might also constitute an unjust discrimination, and therefore be in violation of Section 2 of the Act, in this case, the gist of which is an alleged undue and unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage as between two localities, we do not find that Section 2 has been violated."

In arriving at its conclusion the Commission followed the Wright case and said:

"The purpose of Section 2 of the Act is to enforce equality as between shippers and to prohibit any rebate or other device by which two shippers, shipping over the same line, the same distance, under the same circumstances of carriage, are compelled to pay different prices therefor."

It should be noticed "like kind of traffic" has been heretofore referred to, and a word in connection with this phrase is of interest.

Sugar and Coffee

In the St. Louis Coffee case, 28 ICC 484, complainant's argument as to violation of Section 2 was based on the theory that coffee and sugar are like kinds of traffic, that they move under similar circumstances and conditions, and that unjust discrimination results from the difference in rates on these products. The Commission, disagreeing with this contention, said:

"Sugar and coffee are not like kinds of traffic within the meaning of Section 2 and the carrier contends that the circumstances affecting their carriage are dissimilar. They differ materially in weight, value, space occupied, form of package and volume of movement. We are of the opinion that the maintenance of different rates on coffee and sugar is not in violation of Section 2."

In the Chicago Board of Trade case, 27 ICC 530, et seq, it was alleged that the maintenance of a higher rate on wheat than on coarse grain violated Section 2, in that different rates are collected for like kinds of traffic under substantially similar circumstances and conditions. In its finding the Commission said:

"While these commodities are similar in general appearance and to that extent are 'like,' and while the manner in which they are actually transported may be substantially similar, we do not believe this section of the Act susceptible to such literal interpretation, but think it must be considered in the light of the evils which its history indicate the intention of Congress to correct. This section, as has been frequently stated both by this Commission and by the Supreme Court, is founded upon the equality clause of the English Act. It leaves to Section 3 the prohibition of undue prejudice to one commodity, and undue prejudice to another, and it should not be made the basis for fixing the relationship of rates upon kindred commodities. If inequality results from the exaction of a special rate to one shipper and a different rate to another upon like traffic contemporaneously transported under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, the section is violated. In the present instance we do not believe the commodities in question constitute the traffic referred to in Section 2 and we cannot find the principle of equality there prohibited here violated. Nor are we able to find any unjust discrimination resulting from the exaction of the higher rate on wheat than on coarse grain, commodities competitive in no practical sense."

With the language of the Supreme Court in Houston & Texas Ry. vs. United States, 234 U. S. 342 (the so-called Shreveport case) before it, the Commission described the scope of Section 3 in the Dimmitt-Caudle Smith Livestock Commission case, 47 ICC 287, 319, in the following language:

"This all-embracing prohibition extends to any and all acts, rates, regulations or practices by which the forbidden result is brought about."

In Jones vs. Pa. R. R. Co., 17 ICC 361, 370, the Commission in considering Section 3 stated:

"The latter (Section 3) is comprehensive enough, standing alone, to include every form of unjust discrimination, not only in rates, but also in the conveniences and facilities supplied to shippers in any of the details of the carrying service, and such is the judicial construction in England of the term 'undue or unreasonable preference or advantage' as used in the English 'Railway and Canal Traffic Act' (17 and 18 Vict. c 31, Sec. 2)."

This case was submitted to the Commission in 1908. In making a similar finding today the Commission would substitute the words "preference" or "prejudice" for the word "discrimination" in the quotation.

Another Ruling

In the Board of Trade of Carrollton, Ga., case, 28 ICC 154, 167, in commenting upon Section 3 the Commission said:

"In reaching these conclusions we bear in mind that the third section of the Act forbids the giving of undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any particular person, company, firm, corporation or locality; and while this section does not carry the phrase embodied in Section 2, 'under substantially similar circumstances and conditions' . . . nevertheless, it contains words of wider scope, 'in any respect whatsoever'; and, as a matter of practical application, the thought, if not the words, 'under substantially similar circumstances and conditions' must be present to the mind in considering under Section 3 what preferences or advantages are due or reasonable or are undue or unreasonable."

It would, therefore, seem to follow that any relief arising from undue preference, prejudice, advantage or disadvantage as between different shippers, different localities or different classes of traffic, should be sought through the application of Section 3.

National Conference Called to Inquire Into All Phases of Distribution

Warehousing to Participate in U. S. Chamber Plan to Formulate Program to Find Out What Becomes of the Well Known "Spread"

A NATIONAL conference on distribution is to be held in Washington January 14-15 under the auspices of the Domestic Distribution Department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

The conference will consider the problem of distribution, compounded of all the factors that enter into the "spread" of the price of an article on its way from producer to consumer, and will formulate a program of investigation to be carried on by representative committees of business men and economists.

The recommendations of these committees, each dealing with a different phase of the inquiry, will form the basis of discussion at a final conference representative of all branches of commercial activity, including public warehousing, involved in distribution, and the Domestic Distribution Department hopes that there will be evolved a definite course of action, if such is practical, to reduce the growing costs of distribution.

This undertaking by the national Chamber constitutes the first concerted attack by business men from the viewpoint of the distributor and in the opinion of Alvin E. Dodd, manager of the Domestic Distribution Department, it will be the most important meeting ever held on the subject of distribution, with results anticipated which should provide benefits for many years to come.

The field of inquiry which the conference will cover is for the most part unexplored, yet it is the field of the greatest price expansion. It has been stated that of each dollar spent by the consumer, almost half (49 cents) goes to pay for the cost of selling and distributing. Whether this is correct it will be the purpose of the conference to point the way by which the expense of distribution may be reduced.

Department's Announcement

The Domestic Distribution Department says in its announcement covering the conference:

"Few subjects relating to what is called business are of so great interest to the average man or woman as what happens in the spread of price between producer and consumer. Periods of high prices bring about an insistent demand that the public shall be shown why the cost of articles, generally speaking, should be doubled, or even trebled, between producer and consumer. There are very good reasons why this situation should be uppermost in the minds of the average person since the cost of living today is about 60 per cent above that prevailing in 1913.

"The complaint does not stop there. Profits not only seem too large, but the public suspects that too many people are getting them, and it is eagerly trying to arrive at an understanding of distribution, comparable, at least, to the understanding which the public has of production. This interest is reflected in many ways, chief among which are the various investigations conducted in Washington and the various kinds of legislation—such as the bill to control the grain exchanges, the coal and packers' bill, and other similar measures both national and State.

Some Statistics

"Estimates of the annual expenditures for merchandise sold at retail during the year 1922 vary from a minimum of about $24,000,000,000 to a maximum of about $40,000,000,000. Assuming that $32,000,000,000 is most nearly correct, an idea of its relative importance is obtained by comparing it with the total value of all products of the mines and the farms during the same period. This was $16,558,000,000.

"If to the $32,000,000,000 annual retail business the wholesaling function is added, the stupendous sum of $56,000,000,000 is obtained as the measure of transactions which take place after the merchandise has left the possession of its producers.

"The Joint Commission of Agricultural Inquiry uncovered a great many important facts regarding distribution but they were of a temporary character. The Commission did not deal at all with many of the important elements of distribution which today remain untouched.

"Bankers, insurance companies and manufacturers are provided with the means for studying their common problems of cost and methods. Among all of the large groups of business men, distributors as a single body, when faced with problems common to all of them, are found least able to defend themselves from unjust charges or to escape from many of the conditions which form an obstruction to the most efficient merchandising practices. In this connection it is of special interest to note that the owners of establishments employed in distribution constitute the largest single class of business men in the United States, numbering not less than 1,500,000.

"One of the difficulties encountered in approaching the problem of distribution is that, unlike transportation and manufacture, it is almost wholly intangible. Transportation and manufacture are visualized as organized systems, even machines, while distribution is regarded principally as a series of acts. For the former there is available much valuable statistical information. For the latter there is a little or none. Some of the trades have taken measures to bring their members into a more harmonious relationship but very little has been done to create machinery which shall bring together representatives of an entire trade in all its branches.

"Charges are frequent that there are too many grocery stores, but they cannot even be answered because even the approximate number of groceries is not known. Producers of merchandise cannot apportion their sales because the number of outlets is not known.

"These and many other considerations enter into the problem of distribution. As practical results of the contemplated survey it is possible that material savings may be accomplished by reducing the amount and number of failures throughout all industry by reducing the costs of doing business and the ultimate price to the consumer, and by placing the distributor in a better relation to his customers."

Origin and Development of the Warehouse Receipt

The Negotiable "Warrant" Harks Back to Lombardy. Here is a Review—and Some Suggestions —Based on a Two-Year Inquiry Into the Storage Business

By H. A. HARING

EIGHT years ago the buying representative of a group of English cotton mills asked a New Orleans warehouseman: "Can we Lombard the cotton here until we get bottoms for the overseas shipment?"

"Can you do what?" came from the puzzled warehouseman.

"Lombard the cotton—take the warehouse receipts to a bank and make a loan."

"Sure you can borrow against the bales, but what's that 'Lombard' stuff? I never heard the word before."

It quickly became apparent that the Englishman, who was one of the special buying agents sent to this country in the early years of the war, was merely using the ordinary word of the London market—a word which was, however, wholly new to the warehouseman.

The word harks back to the earliest commercial warehousing, which developed in Italy, particularly at Venice. In that city were held in store the goods of the merchants of all Europe. For the greater security of distant owners of these stored goods the Venetians originated the idea of bonding their warehouses and, shortly thereafter, they instituted a system of warehouse receipts. These "warrants," as at first styled, passed from hand to hand among merchants and traders, they being recognized as "good delivery" for standard quantities of wool and silk throughout all Europe.

The bankers of northern Italy, in the province called Lombardy, were first to perceive that these warehouse "warrants" were valid title to merchandise. They had confidence in the warehousemen of Venice that the merchandise would not be changed, and that it would not be removed without surrender of the proper "warrant." The receipts in hand were, accordingly, accepted by the Lombardy bankers as pledges for loans by merchants and traders. When, in later centuries, these same Italians became the first bankers of England, they carried over to that country not only the name of Lombard to the principal banking street of London but they also injected into our language the word "Lombard." In the language, as used in England, the holder of a warehouse receipt "Lombards" the document with his bank for a loan.

Every time warehouse receipts are thus hypothecated in that country the borrower, unthinkingly, reveals the origin and part of the history of the warehouse receipt.

Preserving Identity

THE warehouse receipt seems always to have been prominent as a means to banking credit. One of the most enlightening of many hundreds of warehousing interviews was with the manager of an Eastern warehouse, who relates:

"I was put in charge of this warehouse ten years ago by the bank where I then worked, but I do not go to the conventions of the association.

"Why? Just as sure as I'd go there'd be a row because some fellow would use the expression 'bankers of merchandise,' as they do in their 'ads.' Then I'd be on my feet and make a fool of myself trying to show him that a warehouse isn't anything like a bank.

"When first I came here, right from the bank, the one thing that struck me most was the difference between warehouse and bank!

"The bank takes the depositor's money. It uses that money any way it likes—loans it, speculates with it, underwrites with it, spends it for a fine building. The only thing the bank agrees to do is to give back to the depositor the same amount of money on demand.

"But the warehouseman has to stand ready to deliver the identical goods deposited without change or substitution, nor can he ever for one minute let the goods get out of his control. If the goods get wet or freeze or ferment or rat-eaten, there's trouble for the warehouseman because he's held to redeliver the original goods. But with the banker it makes no difference what he has done with your deposit. He doesn't even keep a record of what he does. When you demand it he just hands over some other fellow's money that he has on hand.

"The only time the banker has to worry is when all his depositors demand all their deposits at once. A warehouseman never has that scare. He's ready any day for them all; he always can deliver the total of everything his receipts call for."

In this country the warehouseman is required to keep the goods of each depositor separate from those of all others, end even from other goods of the same depositor for which separate receipt is outstanding, so as to permit at all times the identification and redelivery of the identical goods deposited.

This requirement of the law is comparatively recent. Only the older men in the industry can remember the malodorous reputation the industry once held. A search of Court records has revealed the fact that in every State of the Union lapses of warehousemen's integrity had occurred prior to the year 1900 (some of our present States were then not admitted to Statehood).

Greatest wrongs came with staple farm products rather than for merchandise. Temptation was too great for warehousemen of wobbling character and they speculated for their own account with the cotton or the grain. Warehouse receipts, except at half a dozen cities, were of doubtful value during the first thirty years after the Civil War, chiefly because grain and cotton warehousemen threw upon the whole industry a questionable integrity. Wherever the industry has fallen short of making its receipts good by delivering the goods, it has inevitably collapsed.

Implement storage suffered, as did also the earlier merchandise storage. Their receipts had questionable value as bankable collateral. As recently as 1902 an investigation by the Department of Commerce showed that warehouse receipts in this country had failed utterly to gain the credence of bankers as they had in all other commercial countries.

But help came where least expected. The cold-storage warehouses began by financing their depositors, and as demand for loans increased this type of warehousing, under the law, developed a better type of warehouse receipt.

As, with the last forty years, implement storage has waned and merchandise storage grown, business practice has tightened the yoke of responsibility on the warehouseman.

His receipt now leaves neither leeway nor loophole. He must hold, as in trust, within his immediate control, the identical goods and the full quantity of them.

Fungible Goods

ONE modification is permissible in the identity of goods. There are some classes of commodities so alike that the quantities put into store by different owners need not be separated. They are commingled in store. Such commodities are known as "fungible goods."

The receipt issued to each depositor stipulates that he is the owner of a certain quantity of the common store of commingled goods. When delivery is demanded he is given by measure or weight merely the proper quantity of the lot. If, on the other hand, fire or other damage occurs to the goods, each receipt holder shares the loss in ratio to his holdings of the commingled whole.

Of such "fungible goods," in this country the grains are the most important. As received into store, the grain is graded by inspection and weighed. It is then customary with the warehouses (elevators) to stow away in a single compartment all grain of a single grade and kind, regardless of the ownership of the component parts of the lot.

Other common examples of "fungible goods" in this country are flour and provisions, pig iron, sugar and coffee and rice, cotton and wool, hay and straw, tobacco to some extent, peanuts and sunflower seed, potatoes and oranges, raisins and graded fruits of all sorts, beans, and broom-corn.

Although the warehouseman is permitted to commingle goods of this sort his risk for the goods is not lessened in any respect. He is still forbidden to lend out or divert to other purposes and he is at all times held liable for the total of all the goods for which receipts are outstanding.

THIS article by Mr. Haring—dealing with the origin of the present-day warehouse receipt and with the current uses of that document—is a distinct contribution to the industry's literature and is of informative value to every public storage executive.

For two years Mr. Haring has been investigating all phases of warehousing and has interviewed hundreds of men in the industry. Out of the article herewith published, and out of another article to come, storage executives will get some helpful thoughts on the development of new business—at a time when merchandise warehousing is relatively smaller in volume than during the past few years.

Today, the author says, there is a definite demand for a merchandise warehouse receipt without the words "Said to contain." On the other hand, such a clause, admittedly legal in character, is necessary for protecting the warehouseman against imposition. Mr. Haring has something interesting to say regarding this phase of the storage business—and offers a suggestion.

And do you know what it means to "Lombard" goods?

The Receipt a Symbol

THE warehouse "warrant" as it arose in Venice made possible a change in the methods of trade. Throughout all the centuries, until within the past four or five, the law of the market was unchanged.

Until warehouse receipts were devised there was but one method of trading. The seller had no choice other than to bring his wares to the market place for inspection by prospective buyers. It mattered not whether he was selling cheese or corn, silk or a cow, hay or iron. It was necessary to bring the goods for inspection, and, if a bargain resulted, for delivery to the purchaser. The physical presence of the goods was necessary. Men knew of no way to buy or sell except with visible substances before their eyes. They knew of no way to transfer ownership except by hand-to-hand delivery of the thing itself.

The Oriental market, as seen today in Russia and the Carpathians, is a relic of this ancient method of trading. The size of such a market, as well as the volume of trading, is necessarily limited. The article itself must be present. Larger markets, for larger volume of goods, became possible historically only when some symbol of the goods was accepted by buyer and seller alike as representative of the goods.

Just as soon as warehouse "warrants" were recognized as valid title to the goods, all trade took on new character. Thenceforward, larger quantities could be traded in. Transactions, too, could be spread over greater distances than when both seller and buyer were inseparably cumbered with the goods in material form. The owner's order against the warehouseman of Venice, accompanied by the original "warrant" (receipt), enabled the merchants to travel all over Europe to sell, deliver and collect the price, without carrying the goods from market to market.

In our own day, the warehouse receipt has become the buttress of all the trading exchanges. Goods in store are the commodities bought and sold on all the commodity exchanges. The warehouse receipt drawn against such goods in store (together with the bill of lading for goods in transit) is the medium of delivery on these exchanges. On the stock exchange, the stock certificate and the bond represent the corporate property in which trading is done. On the commodity exchanges, the delivery of warehouse receipts gives the same quality of mobility to the commodities thereon bought and sold. The warehouse receipt effectuates transfer of title to grain and cotton, cured meat or perishable produce, without either buyer or seller being burdened with the great bulk of the goods.

Only by having some such convenient manner of handling bulky commodities is it possible for organized trading to exist. The warehouse receipt, as symbol for the goods, renders the vast produce of the country available for business purposes.

Without our warehouses as places of storage and without the warehouse receipt as a negotiable document of title, the commodity exchanges would cease to function. These trading marts deal in goods which repose in warehouses (including elevators). Contracts, both spot and future, are satisfied by delivery not of the physical commodity in all its bulk, but of the warehouse receipt as symbol for the goods.

The receipt passes current because, like the bank-note, it may at will be converted into the commodity.

It is due to the importance of warehouse receipts on the exchanges that there was developed the principle of "fungible goods" already mentioned. Early warehouse receipts, both abroad and in America, represented a specific lot of goods. The identity of each lot was carefully maintained in the warehouse. The seller and buyer bargained for this lot of goods. When a sale was made, the warehouse receipt transferred title to that specific lot. Neither seller nor buyer could alter the quantity available, and, when finally delivery was demanded, the identical lot, neither more nor less, was of course handed over to the purchaser.

Credit is given to the English exchanges for first devising the "general warrant" or "general receipt." It emerged almost exactly two hundred years ago in the English metals trades. There the custom developed of storing pig iron and pig tin in bulk. All the metal of a single commercial grade was warehoused in one lot without preserving the identity of single deposits. Although owned by different depositors, the idea was conceived of thus storing in bulk goods of one class, later to be withdrawn on presentation of the "general warrant" which had been issued. It was found possible to divide the quantity of goods on a receipt by splitting it into two. A number of "general warrants" could also be combined into larger units without disturbing the goods and without actually handling what was in store.

Hence developed the custom of trading not in such odd quantities as happened to go into storage in single lots, but of restricting the buyer and seller to multiples of standard quantities. Odd lots became merged into recognized units.

The advantages of such general receipts would appear to be obvious, and yet the next development was delayed 130 years. When it came, what England was doing for pig iron and tin, America did first for grain. As our West developed, the grain elevatormen of the Erie Canal and the Great Lakes ports found it increasingly difficult to deliver on demand the actual wheat which had been deposited. Gradually the habit grew of storing wheat of like grade in a single compartment and of making delivery by drawing from that compartment the specified quantity, regardless of ownership. Thus came the American idea of "fungible goods."

The principle of "fungible goods" applied first to wheat, and for ten years only to wheat. In 1859, receipts for commingled grain were first made "good delivery" at Chicago, but not until fifteen years later (1874) did the Produce Exchange of New York either permit or accept delivery in the form of "general warehouse receipts." Salt fish and mess pork next followed as "fungible goods," with coffee and sugar soon after.

At the present time, in order to be "good delivery" on the exchanges, warehouse receipts must be in multiples of standard units. For grain these units are 1000 bushels; for cotton, 100 bales; for raw sugar, 50 tons of 2240 pounds; for refined sugar, 800 bags of 100 pounds at New York and 600 bags at New Orleans; for coffee, 250 bags of 130 pounds; for rough rice, 1440 bags or 400 barrels; for cleaned rice, 400 bags of 100 pounds; for provisions, odd lots are permitted. Delivery, further, is "good" only when the receipts are issued by warehouses that have formally been declared "regular" by the particular exchange. Such "regular" warehouses are rigidly inspected by the exchange and usually their receipts required to be registered by the exchange.

The Merchandise Receipt

IN the warehousing of general merchandise, both manufactured and cold-storage products, the receipt is often used as collateral for loans. By such use of the receipt dead merchandise, awaiting a market, may be converted into liquid capital by the owner.

Probably no commercial contribution of the warehouse has exceeded what it has made possible in this way. The receipt is commonly thought of as a document for credit purposes, and yet, except for grain, whiskey and tobacco and cotton, American warehouse receipts were not twenty years ago readily acceptable as collateral.

Warehoused goods are dead value unless it is made possible to use them as collateral. They are, for the time being, out of the channels of trade. They are all the while, however, tangible property of value and they offer a commendable degree of security for a loan. Twenty years ago, the Department of Commerce, after a year's investigation, commented:

"Warehousing as it relates to banking and commerce is older than modern times; yet in the United States there has not been the development in this direction which . . . has been made abroad. What we need here is to widen the function of stored goods as collateral. . . . Instead of narrowing the collateral availability of stored merchandise, it would appear that the opposite tendency affords a much safer development."

RESULTS of Mr. Haring's two-year inquiry into warehousing are to be published in book form—a comprehensive outline of the industry's relations with business, covering customs house, furniture, cold storage, custodian, railroad and wharf, yard and ground, implement and vehicle, grain, cotton, tobacco, wool and general merchandise warehousing. It will deal with the services and functions of the industry, its legal bearings, its problems of insurance, its relations to banking, and will digest the laws of the forty-eight States for each type of the industry.

The aim of the study has been to produce for warehousing such a handbook of information and guidance as is available for other industries, and to provide for warehouse patrons a source from which to derive a proper basis for locating warehouse connections.

Every warehouseman is acquainted with what is now the condition. It is not, therefore, necessary to go into details to show the readers of Distribution & Warehousing how greatly conditions have improved in the twenty years since that report was written.

The Custodian Receipt

WAREHOUSEMEN in general seem not to grasp the importance of what is known as "custodian warehousing." The relatively few warehousemen who have developed this field are enthusiastic, but the fact remains that the principle has been but little applied and when applied it has been limited chiefly to two commodities.

"Custodian warehousing" is the storing of goods on the premises of the owner, guarded by an authorized custodian who alone controls the property. The goods are not removed from the farm or the factory. They are, however, segregated from all other goods by being stored in separate buildings, the control of which is handed over to the warehouseman and the owner wholly excluded.

The custodian warehouseman assumes sole responsibility for the goods (1) by formally signing a lease for a suitable building on the premises of the owner for storage of the goods; and (2) by his naming a resident agent or occupant, other than the owner of the goods, as warehouse agent and authorized custodian of the building and its contents.

The primary purpose of custodian storage is to enable the owner to borrow against the goods—either to larger extent than if they be merged in his general assets, or for the greater protection of the bank which insists on segregation of the goods.

The owner does not wish to pay the costs of storing with a public warehouseman. He does not desire the services of a warehouseman for anything other than for the receipt he issues. The receipt is desired and very badly needed.

Hence a warehouseman becomes guardian, so to speak, of the goods in order that he may issue a valid receipt—so valid that the loaning bank is satisfied that the goods will not be tampered with by the owner.

This type of warehouse receipt originated, apparently, in agriculture. It is widely used for cotton and wool, and, of the past four years, for grain. Such uses do not especially interest the merchandise warehouseman but he is interested in its use for manufactured goods.

Of manufactured goods, canned goods and automobiles have most extensively availed themselves of the opportunity. Detroit is filled with this type of warehousing, not only in buildings belonging to the automobile makers but in buildings of the fair grounds and every vacant structure within fifty miles.

Some sheds of the stock yards at Chicago are used for the same purpose.

With these and similar instances, warehousemen are generally familiar.

Warehousemen seem not, however, to go after business of this sort. Wherever it has developed, the banks have usually moved first, they coming to the warehouseman as the most natural disinterested party to become custodian.

Several Court decisions (notably in Washington and Connecticut) have frowned on this method of custodian warehousing, holding that a warehouseman may not properly function as warehouseman except in his own place of business, and in at least one instance it has been held that such custodian receipts are not validly warehouse receipts in the sense laid down by the Uniform Warehouse Receipts Act.

The Federal Reserve Board has taken the contrary position. Inasmuch as this board through its rulings governs the Federal Reserve Banks and, through them, the member banks, any position that the board takes becomes the guide for banking practice.

This board, in a long series of rulings, beginning in 1918, has announced such principles as these:

"If the premises in question are actually turned over to the lessee warehouseman under a bona fide lease, the lessee being independent of the borrower; and having entire control and custody of the goods, there would seem to be no objection to the member bank accepting drafts drawn against the security of warehouse receipts issued by such lessee warehouseman.

"It should, however, be expressly understood and agreed that the borrower shall not have access to the premises except with permission of the warehouseman and that he shall exercise no control of any sort over the goods against which the warehouse receipts are issued."

At another time the board stated:

"It being understood that the goods are stored in buildings under control of custodian entirely independent of the borrower, the custodian certificate or receipt, if issued in proper form to convey or secure proper title, may be treated as a warehouse receipt . . . and the paper would be eligible for rediscount."

Custodian warehousing is extensively used at Chicago, Cincinnati and Milwaukee by their boards of trade. By this means grain at Chicago and Milwaukee and hay and straw at Cincinnati are made available for "regular delivery" on the exchanges, although not stored with public warehousemen.

The exchange at Chicago places its custodian in charge of the elevator (sometimes only a portion of it) in which the owner's grain is stored. At the close of the day this custodian seals the engine, conveyors, shipping bins and spouts so as to prevent removal or tampering with the grain during his absence. The custodian receipts issued are emitted by the Chicago Board of Trade.

At Milwaukee a somewhat similar method has been instituted. Until within three years the banks of that city recognized elevator receipts issued by the warehouseman for his own grain but when these receipts were presented to Federal Reserve Banks for rediscount they failed to pass muster, inasmuch as the warehouseman held an interest in the goods. Accordingly that city has developed a system of "registered storage warehouse receipts," which are merely custodian receipts under a new name.

In Cincinnati, the custodian of the Hay & Grain Exchange deals chiefly with hay and straw for that market, his custodianship not only covering the warehouses but also commodities in railroad cars, the bill-of-lading being assigned to him.

Banks, everywhere, show marked favor for warehoused goods for loans. Such goods are segregated from the raw material and other assets of the factory, and, under the roof of the warehouseman, they warrant far heavier loans than the same goods remaining in the hands of the manufactory.

ALL the advantages, to manufacturers, of having spot stocks warehoused at strategic centers and of adjusting supply to demand, are appreciated by shippers, Mr. Haring says in this article, but—

"A stronger appeal comes when they learn that warehoused goods have enhanced value as collateral. . . . The warehouseman's receipt weighs more with a banker than the manufacturer's 'statement.' The more manufacturers learn this lesson the more willingly will they patronize public warehouses for all their output."

In the factory they are merged in the general inventory account. In the factory the finished wares are liable to attachment, or, in case of insolvency, they become part of the general assets for creditors. Under the warehouse roof, however, they are not attachable, nor are they available for other creditors until after the bank's claim is satisfied in full. For these, and similar reasons, warehoused goods make prime commercial paper.

Warehousemen who bring to attention of patrons these advantages can readily add to their business by serving as custodians for factories; sometimes even for merchants and commission dealers. Aside from the revenue thus earned for themselves, warehousemen will greatly advertise their industry.

As manufacturers more and more become patrons of the public warehouse, one of the unexpected results is that they learn the benefits of segregating their goods. All the advantages of having spot stock at strategic centers and of adjusting supply to demand are appreciated, but a stronger appeal comes when they learn, through some experience, that warehoused goods have enhanced value as collateral.

Any increase in custodian warehousing for factories will teach a new lot of manufacturers that the warehouseman's receipt weighs more with a banker than the manufacturer's "statement." The more manufacturers learn this lesson the more willingly will they patronize public warehouses for all their output.

Since the inception of the Federal Reserve system it has become a custom for each Reserve District to "approve" certain warehouses. Their receipts, thereupon, have peculiar value for borrowers.

Within each city, too, by a process of elimination from experience, the banks willing accept for collateral the receipts of some warehouses while they show hesitation as to others.

Nothing can be written in the law strong enough to make a good receipt from a careless warehouseman.

Good reputation on the part of the warehouseman helps his depositor to borrow.

Nor does it always follow that a State license makes reputation. All the high-sounding words of "license" and "bond," printed on the receipt, avail little unless the State is known to maintain a thorough inspection service.

In Georgia a banker showed the application of a cotton-grower for a loan on 27 bales of cotton, supported by a warehouse receipt for each bale, the receipts being all issued by a warehouse bonded and licensed in a neighboring State. The bank's investigator had, however, reported that:

"The warehouse is the garage of the cotton-grower. It stands on his farm. The 'State-bonded warehouseman' is his 17-year-old daughter. The key to the 'warehouse' is carried by the man himself."

"Said to Contain"

THOSE owners of goods who borrow on merchandise warehouse receipts regularly run amuck of one difficulty. When they proffer the receipts to the bank, three or four words suddenly blaze forth from the face of the receipt—words, too, which before had not been noticed.

The warehouseman executes his receipt for a certain number of boxes or packages, with minute description of the marks and weights. Then, instead of saying what they contain, the receipt shouts out "Said to Contain" or "Order and Condition Unknown."

The borrower has applied for a loan on certain goods but the warehouseman sends the banker a notice that the containers may not contain the things that the borrower claims.

Only by using such a phrase, of course, can the warehouseman protect himself from mis-description under the law.

Only thus can he avoid guaranteeing the contents of the packages.

By this very protection, none the less, the warehouseman detracts from the value of his receipt.

The warehouse receipt is worthless, as collateral, unless the banker knows the goods to be in the warehouse. He trusts the warehouseman that they will not be tampered with nor spirited away.

He does not feel safe, always, as he reads those phrases. They sign-post the suggestion that the packages may be empty.

"It seems to me," said a borrower to a Philadelphia bank, "that you ought to advance us more than fifty per cent of value on our yarn."

"We would," replied the cashier, "if there was some way of knowing that it is yarn."

"It is, sir. The receipt says so."

"Not a bit of it. The receipt identifies the cases but you make the bank take all the risk of false packing. If you'll get the warehouse to cross off that said-to-contain part, the bank'll loan you ninety per cent of market value."

"The warehouse won't do it, sir, unless we let them examine every case."

"That's exactly what they should do!" was the banker's sharp retort—and they did.

In a Cleveland bank, a borrower complained:

"I've a brother in the paint business and he can borrow nine-tenths of the value of the flaxseed he has in warehouses. A cousin, who makes peanut butter, can do the same on peanuts. But here I'm a soap maker, and the banks cut me down to sixty or sixty-five per cent. I can't see why soap and washing compounds aren't as good security as flaxseed or Virginia peanuts—it's got me staggered."

"The reason's simple," the banker explained. "The seed and the peanuts are inspected and graded and weighed by the warehouse. When we get the receipt, we know it's all flaxseed or peanuts, sound value. But you hand us a receipt that contradicts itself. Your warehouseman doesn't even say the boxes contain any soap—all he says is that you said they have soap inside. You get smaller loans because you bring less security."

"But the soap's there," protested the manufacturer.

"Then let the warehouseman inspect it and tell us in his receipt how many pounds it weighs," commented the banker, "instead of hiding behind an alibi."

Such instances illustrate what is occurring every day with borrowers.

The phrases "Said to Contain" and similar statements made little difference until depositors of goods began to use merchandise receipts as collateral. They make no difference, today, with such storage as furniture and household goods for the reason that owners of such goods do not borrow against them. These words do, however, sharply divide warehoused goods into two classes: those that are subject to the warehouseman's reservation as to contents, and those that are fully warranted.

The owner of naval stores out in the yard of a Southern port warehouse with nothing but a "ground-storage" receipt, or the owner of hay in the hay-houses at Baltimore, is able to borrow more in proportion to value than the owner of raw silk in the finest warehouse in New York. Even within the cities, warehoused washing machines in crates make better collateral than boxed typewriters in the same warehouse, because, and only because, in the one case the warehouseman can warrant the goods, while in the other he dare not.

The warehousing industry must, for the sake of its patrons, solve the "Said to Contain" situation.

For the warehouseman's protection against imposition the clause is needed, as it is, of course, thoroughly legal. There is, nevertheless, a definite demand for merchandise receipts without the three fateful words.

It would seem, to one who has interviewed hundreds of warehousemen and hundreds of patrons as well, that the solution lies definitely in one direction.

If patrons, or banks, desire receipts without the reservation of "Said to Contain," the warehouseman might fittingly offer receipts with full guarantee of contents — weight, grade, condition, etc. This is done by warehousemen of all the grains, cotton and wool, tobacco, beans, potatoes and apples and fruits, broomcorn and rice, coffee and sugar, provisions and linseed oil, and twenty or thirty minor products.

Warehousemen of those products inspect and grade and weigh the goods as received into store, and, when delivering from store, these operations are repeated. If the owner of the goods requests not to have such inspection, it is omitted. In that case it is also omitted in the receipt to state grade and condition. The owner is, however, in each case charged a fee for the in-inspection as well as the out-inspection. Similar fees properly should be assessed for merchandise that is inspected.

Such inspection and such warranty on the receipt would fit in with appraisal services as now performed by some warehousemen. The added services would become an enlargement of the assorting and checking that all warehouses find necessary.

If done, the merchandise receipt would gain greatly in favor as collateral, particularly receipts by warehousemen of proved integrity.

Tires Should Be Stored Side by Side, Away from Moisture and in Darkened and Cool Space

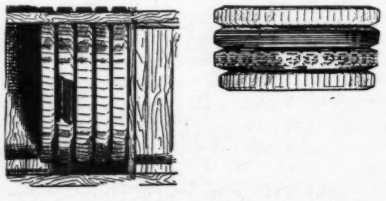

MERLE M. DUNBAR, who has had broad experience in tire and tube manufacturing, has worked out some practical ideas on the storage of tires and these should be of interest to the warehouseman. Mr. Dunbar says:

"There are many agents at work that tend to shorten the life and durability of a tire, but chief among these are light and heat.

"Tires should be stored in racks side by side in a room where there are no bright lights, away from heat. Vulcanization is never complete in a tire, and hence there is always present some free sulphur or other vulcanizing agent which works its way to the surface, making gray crystalline spots, and if it is present in sufficient quantities will cover completely the whole tire. This is called blooming. Light and heat are active agencies which carry on this surface vulcanizing. Hence a tire will become hard and brittle in time and therefore it follows that tires should never be left near windows longer than a day or so at a time when they are exposed to direct light and heat and even sunlight.

Moisture an Evil

"If possible tires should be stored in a room where there is little moisture. Such a room is usually dark and the moisture will have a tendency to retard the blooming and surface vulcanizing. Care should be taken that there is not enough moisture present to cause mold to form.

Tires should be stored in tier racks so that they stand side by side—never one on top of the other

"Tires should be stored in tier racks so they stand side by side and never one on top of the other for any length of time, even though they are off the floor. By so doing those on the bottom of the pile will naturally be bearing the brunt of the weight and be distorted. When tires are manufactured they are vulcanized under pressure and assume the shape they will have while in use, so nothing should change that shape.

"It is a good plan to leave the tires in their original wrappers until they are used, whenever it is possible, because these wrappers will keep the tires in their proper shape and keep out light as well.

"Needless to say that oils and greases have a deteriorating effect on all rubber and cotton goods, especially where the crude rubber content is large. They make the rubber soft, spongy and lifeless and, when they penetrate into the carcass, destroy the strength of the cotton fibers, thereby leaving the tire in a weakened condition."

Our Poem Department

OUR plea for an elegant poem for publication in Two Bits has been responded to be J. U. H. Barker, prexy of the Barker Warehouse Co., Inc., of Atlanta, Ga. We present this mo. (Jan.) Storager Barker's really worthwhile verse, entitled—

The Warehouse

By J. U. H. Barker
the Atlanta, Ga., Storager.

Within these walls a thousand functions play;
Dim mounts of goods o'ershadow dimmer aisles.
One breathes the fragrant scents of far Cathay,
Or odorous musk from out Australian wilds.
The nostrils tingle, vexed by varied smells,
While ear drums vibrate to the resonant sounds—
Concatenated lawless noise that swells
And sinks again.
I tread my hourly rounds
On weary feet. The day is far advanced
And aching muscles cry for home and rest;
Yet suddenly perforce I stand, entranced,
While strange emotions seethe within my breast.
The sounds are stilled. I sense the close of day.
The sweating laborers vanish like dim shades.
Remain the dust motes dancing in a ray
Of slanting sunlight.
Down those dark arcades
Processions move, deep burdened with the spoil
Of mighty forests, swamps, and fertile fields:
Huge sacks of coffee, heavy drums of oil,
Uncounted products which the Orient yields.
About the wharves the legions congregate
To pour these riches into yawning holds
Of ships, tall masted, lying there in wait
To bear them hither.
Utter darkness folds
These dull prosaic heaps of merchandise
Within her sable mantle. I awake
To sound realities, and suddenly am advised
Of that cold fact that I've a car to take;
And colder still, that that good wife of mine,
Obsessed with dinner pail and breakfast care,
Incontinently forgot the usual dime,
And left me stranded without street car fare.

In response to Two Bits's plea in our Nov. issue for items to fill up space on this page, the ——— Warehouse Co., Chicago, submits the following so-called verse:

"A woman, she happened in our warehouse to-day,
& of all the compliments she did have to pay!
'Your service is wonderful, & indeed the right kind
For particular people who know their own mind.
Whenever I'm moving, in Chicago or out,
No one but ——'s—they remove all doubt.
Your men are efficient, your equipment superb,
I surely do thank you for all the good work.
Your motto will always remain in my mind,
For service from ——'s is the only kind.'"

We feel obliged to omit the co.'s name on a/c: (a) they should pay advt'g rates, which are on file at this office; (b) "good work" is a rotten rhyme for "superb," & Two Bits is an intellectual paper.

A Lethal Chamber for the Moth

Some Suggestions About the Eradication of An Unpopular Warehouse Pest

By HUGH G. BERSIE,

Engineer, Haskelite Manufacturing Corporation, Chicago

MANY factors, such as the housing shortage, have encouraged the widespread use of public warehouses for the storage of household furniture and personal effects. However, not an unimportant factor has been the aggressive, wideawake methods of the warehousemen themselves. Employing out-of-door advertising and newspaper advertising, they have made their services well known to their communities. They have shown their progressiveness also in adopting modern equipment for the purpose of enlarging their ability to give the public more efficient service.

In keeping with this spirit of progress, we record in this article some of the advances made in the methods of storing furs, Oriental rugs, upholstered furniture and other material that is subject to attack by moths.

Most of us do not appreciate the seriousness of the moth evil. Conservatively it is estimated that more than $200,000,000 damage is caused yearly by the common everyday clothes moth.

IN Fig. 1 and Fig. 2 we are showing pieces of woolens which illustrate the very serious damage caused in each case by a single moth egg placed on the material.

A moth egg is about the size of the periods the printer uses on this page.

The potential destructiveness of the moth tribe is well recognized when it is recalled that a moth lays not one egg but more than 200.

Probably we are unwarranted in suspecting the warehouseman of not appreciating the gravity of the moth evil. In building cold storage rooms and in installing refrigerating machinery, many of them have gone to great expense and trouble to combat moths. The merit of this method of storage lies in the fact that moths are inactive when cold.

In the matter of killing moths, Government experts are explicit in stating that cold storage is not effective. Bulletin No. 1353, issued by the Bureau of Entomology, states:

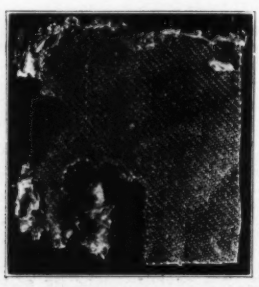

Fig. 1—Illustrating damage wreaked by moth life on a woolen square

A SPECIAL vault built for the purpose of cloth moth fumigation and adaptable to use in public warehouses is the subject of this brief article.

Aging and rotting of garments in storage are minimized when coal soot and alkali are excluded from the inevitable dust, and these elements are, it is claimed, eliminated by the use of the container described.

"Companies should advise patrons that clothes moth larvae can withstand prolonged storage at temperatures ranging from 24 degrees to 45 degrees F. for longer periods than that for which the majority of articles are refrigerated."

Again, in the same Bulletin, we find the statement:

"Thus it was learned that if articles infested with clothes moths were refrigerated at 18 deg. F. for several days, then suddenly exposed for a short time to 50 deg. F., and then returned to 18 deg. F., and finally held permanently at about 40 deg. F., all moth life in them would be killed."

These tests point the way to a method of killing moths by cold storage, but probably in the majority of cases it would not be as practical as a method that employs a gas or fumigant in connection with an air-tight chamber, room or container. This method takes into account the well known fact that while moths can seemingly eat poisonous dyes with immunity, they can't resist certain gases when they are exposed to them in concentrated form. The gases most commonly known are:

1. Hydrocyanic-acid gas,
2. Carbon disulphid.
3. Carbon tetrachlorid.

The hydrocyanic-acid gas is the so-called lethal gas which State authorities used sometime ago to execute a man in New Mexico. It is extremely dangerous to human life and should be handled by experts alone.

The carbon disulphid and carbon tetrachlorid are both effective, but the former more than the latter. The trouble with the tetrachlorid is the difficulty in getting it to evaporate sufficiently to be effective.

The carbon disulphid gives excellent results. It can be purchased at almost any drug store, being commonly called "high life." It kills the moth larvae or worms, the flying moths, and what is more remarkable—it devitalizes all life in the moth eggs.

Fig. 2—What is apt to happen when just one moth lays just one egg on woolen fabric

What are the conditions for satisfactory results with carbon disulphid? These are only two: warmth, and an air-tight container.

In regard to the first, extensive tests have shown that at temperatures below 60 deg. F. the effectiveness of the gas is decreased. Ordinarily, fumigation should not be attempted below 65 deg. F. The reason for this is not so much that the carbon disulphid will not evaporate as that the moth life becomes dormant and its breathing is temporarily suspended.

Getting an air-tight container is not so easy as maintaining the condition of proper temperature. A special vault produced especially for the purpose of cloth moth fumigation is illustrated in Fig. 3. The entire exterior of the vault is steel clad and every detail of construction has been worked out to make it absolutely air-tight.

The United States Government has very definitely expressed its approval of the method of fumigation employed in the vault. Dr. Howard, head of the Bureau of Entomology, writes:

"The quotation from Farmers' Bulletin No. 1353, which reads, 'If used carefully and intelligently as directed, and in proper amounts, carbon disulphid speedily and surely kills fabric pests in tight containers,' represents succinctly the opinion of the experts of this Bureau."

It is fortunate that this process affords a reliable, safe method of freeing furniture from moths in a short time without injury to fabrics or danger to human life. The carbon disulphid gas is inflammable, but with an air-tight vault there is no danger except at the time of opening after a fumigation; at this time, proper precautions may easily be taken and the gas can be dispelled very quickly.

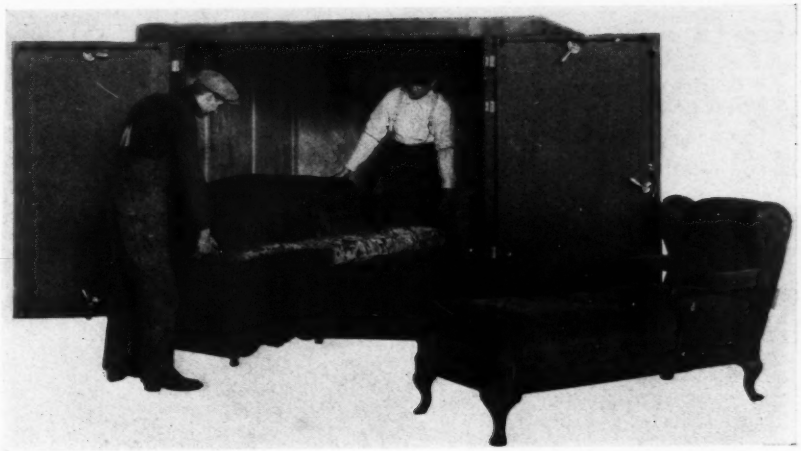

Fig. 3—The moth's lethal chamber. Vault used in some furniture warehouses for the extermination of moth life

When warehousemen have eliminated the moth evil by scientific methods such as these they have gone a long ways toward making storage of fine furs and clothing a popular public service.

But not alone are moths responsible for the aging of fabrics and fur. With the almost universal use of soft coal and likewise the pollution of air with carbon dioxide from automobile exhausts, there exists a vital need for a dustproof storage chamber. This need is shown by an analysis of Chicago's dust which was collected during the summer months. The following surprising results were obtained:

	Per Cent
Tar	3.5
Moisture	4.4
Carbon (coal soot)	39.4
Ash (containing alkali)	52.6

It is obvious that the alkali and soot from soft coal are largely accountable for the premature aging of fabrics. But when these elements, which are present in all dust, are excluded by the use of an air-tight container, then we may keep the garments much cleaner and safe from the aging or rotting effect due to alkaline dust.

Particularly is this true of warehouse storage, where the material is not disturbed for long periods of time and the dust is usually allowed to settle on it.

The point to be emphasized is that these air-tight vaults afford a novel and useful service to the general public.

And it is a service which practically advertises itself.

Has Warehousing Failed to Impress on Manufacturers the Distinction Between a Mere Storage Building and a Distributing Plant?

Printers' Ink, New York, has begun publication of a series of articles by H. A. Haring based on his two-year field survey of the industry in relation to "increasing sales and reducing costs" by manufacturers through more extensive use of the public warehouse method of distribution.

The first of these articles appeared Nov. 20 under the title "How Warehousing Can Promote 'Spot' Stock Turnover." In it Mr. Haring makes this comment:

"Manufacturers are only beginning to see in the public warehouse a huge possibility for distributing their goods. It is a shortcoming of the warehousing industry that it has overlooked its own need of publicity. The industry has failed to impress on manufacturers the distinction between a mere storage building of walls and sprinkler systems and the merchandise warehouse as a concentration and distributing point for goods."

FROM THE LEGAL VIEWPOINT

By George F. Kaiser

A Clerk's Error

LEGAL Editor, Distribution & Warehousing: Your reference to case No. 53, L. L. Cohn & Co. vs. Davis, mentioned in the June, 1924, issue of Distribution & Warehousing, is of interest to us because we have a similar case outstanding for settlement. We give you below actual facts and will thank you to give us an opinion in the matter.

On March 3, 1924, we made shipment to Scott-Mayer Commission Co., Hot Springs, of 20 cases 2-5 gal. Mazola Oil.

The shipment was checked by a Missouri-Pacific clerk at our warehouse and loaded in trap car, which was then switched to the Missouri-Pacific freight depot. Then shipment was again checked and loaded in car for Hot Springs.

When the bill of lading went to the bill clerk, through error he dropped the 2-5 description and let the waybill read "20 cases gal. Mazola Oil." The shipment was checked gal. Mazola Oil at Hot Springs, delivered to Scott-Mayer and noted on their receiving book as gal. Mazola Oil.

On checking our stock, at the close of March, we found our stock over 20 cases 2-5 gal. and short 20 cases of one gallon. Having made a number of similar shipments, we decided to wait until the mistake showed up. After the middle of June the mistake had not shown up, and the overage was sold and the shortage settled.

On June 24 we were notified by the Corn Products Co., through their broker, that at the semi-annual inventory, Scott-Mayer in checking their invoices against receipts discovered that they had paid for 2-5 gal. whereas one gal. had been received.

Between the time of the shipment and the time we were notified of the mistake through the Corn Product Co. the market on Mazola Oil took a considerable advance.

There is no doubt in our mind but that the mistake was made in shipping one gallon for 2-5 gallon, but we raise the question as to who is responsible for the mistake.

The railroad company checked and signed for 2-5 gallon at the warehouse, and is supposed to have checked shipment at the local depot, and then their billing clerk made a mistake by dropping the description and let the waybill read different from the bill of lading.

The case referred to would indicate that the railroad company is liable and that the claim against us by Scott-Mayer should be paid by them.

Thanking you for an answer.—T. W. Co., Little Rock, Ark.

Answer: Yours is an interesting question but isn't it a fact that you have been paid for goods which were never shipped—for goods you still have on hand? If so, I think it would be best to adjust the matter in a proper way, especially in view of an interstate commerce decision holding that "A bill of lading is not conclusive even though unqualified and a carrier is not estopped from showing that the amount or quantity stated was never in fact delivered to it for transportation." (Louisiana State Rice Milling Co. vs. M. L. & P. R. R. & S. S. Co., 34 I. C. C. 511, 515).

The Bad Check Law

LEGAL EDITOR, Distribution & Warehousing: It seems to us that some time ago we saw the New York "Bad Check Law" in your magazine.

Will you tell us what this law provides, as we have been stung by a supposedly reputable man living in our city, and we cannot seem to get him to make good.—J. S., Syracuse, N. Y.

Answer: In New York and in many other States now there is a law which provides as follows:

"Any person who, with intent to defraud, shall make or draw or utter or deliver any check, draft or order for the payment of money upon any bank or other depositary, knowing at the time of such making, drawing, uttering or delivering that the maker or drawer has not sufficient funds in or credit with such bank or other depositary for the payment of such check, although no express representation is made in reference thereto, shall be guilty of attempted larceny, and if money or property is obtained from another thereby, is guilty of larceny and punishable accordingly.

"In any prosecution under this section as against the maker or drawer thereof, the making, drawing, uttering or delivering of a check, draft or order, payment of which is refused by the drawee because of lack of funds or credit, shall be prima facie evidence of intent to defraud and of knowledge of insufficient funds in or credit with such bank or other depositary, unless such maker or drawer shall have paid the drawee thereof the amount due thereon, together with interest and protest fee, within ten days after receiving notice that such check, draft or order has not been paid by the drawee.

"The word 'credit' as used herein shall be construed to mean any arrangement or understanding with the bank or depositary for the payment of such check, draft or order."

State Bond Situation

LEGAL EDITOR, Distribution & Warehousing: In the April number of Distribution & Warehousing you advise an inquiror that there are four classes of bonded warehouses—three United States bonded and the fourth a State bonded warehouse.

Please give us more information concerning this fourth class. Has it any application in States like Indiana and our own where there is no State law providing for bonded warehouses?—T. F. W., Salt Lake City, Utah.

Answer: Unless there is a State statute providing for State bonded warehouses there of course would not be a fourth class in any such State, as the fourth class is essentially a creation of the various State Legislatures by reason of their enactments.

Ohio Regulation

Under the Ohio Public Utilities Commission more than 1890 certificates of public convenience and necessity had been granted up to mid-November and 918 more applications were on file. Two-thirds of all these were for haulage companies, including warehouse firms, the others being for bus concerns. About 160 certificates had been revoked for non-payment of taxes. A number of companies have been discovered operating illegally without licenses.

New U. M. P. Trucks

Two new speed trucks with capacities of 1¼ and 2 tons respectively have been brought out by the United Motors Products Co., Grand Rapids, Mich. They are designed for rapid transport service and have a speed rating of 35 m.p.h.

A History of the Warehouse

VII

Early America

4. Baltimore—Washington—Wheeling

By H. H. MANCHESTER

The Canton district of Baltimore about 1865. The present-day warehousing firm, Canton Company of Baltimore, was established in 1829

THE old route of the border States to the West started from Baltimore, which in early times as now was the emporium for the South. Baltimore, however, scarcely rose to such prominence in Colonial times. It was laid out by an Act of the provincial Legislature in 1729, but had only about 6700 population at the time of the Revolution, and did not receive its first charter as a city until 1795. From that date, however, it grew rapidly and soon had control of much of the southern trade.

One of the most influential institutions of Baltimore almost a century ago, when the city had a population of some 75,000, was the Canton Co., which still has warehouses in operation.

The Canton Co. was incorporated about 1828 by Peter Cooper and others of New York, and by W. Patterson, Columbus O'Donnell, E. Z. Finley and W. Gwynn and others of Baltimore. It purchased the estate of the late John O'Donnell, who had brought in the first ship from Canton, China. The company had the right to hold and improve 10,000 acres of land southeast of Baltimore and along the water front, and proceeded to build wharves and warehouses there and encourage the establishment of industrial plants on their land.

Incidentally, Peter Cooper in 1829 constructed the first American-built locomotive, named after himself, in order to prove the availability of some land which he sold to the Canton Co.

"Arks"

A description of Baltimore in 1833 speaks of the trade and the warehouses of the city.

From the North a great quantity of flour, whiskey, grain, timber, etc., was brought into Baltimore by an immense number of open boats, "arks" and rafts descending the Susquehanna River, the "growth of the valleys of that extensive river." The boats passed through the Susquehanna Canal to Port Deposit, where they were stored until they could be transported in hay crafts to the storehouses on Spear's wharf, Bowley's wharf or the Pratt and Light Street wharves on the basin.

From the West wagons on the Ohio and Susquehanna roads brought in flour, whiskey, peach and apple brandy, cider, apples fresh or dried, flaxseed and linseed oils, sole leather, hogs and salted provisions, butter and lard.

Such western products were either sold on their arrival in the city or deposited in the small storehouses in the upper part of Baltimore Street, Pratt Street, Howard Street, Franklin Street and Pennsylvania Avenue.

Tobacco, because under the inspection of the State, had three State warehouses assigned to it. Two were on the south end of Dugan's wharf, while the third was at Light and Conway Streets. In 1832 about 22,000 hogsheads were brought in altogether. These were worth something over $45 a hogshead, so that the total trade amounted to about $1,000,000 a year.

Richmond Stored Tobacco

Virginia had similar laws about the warehousing and inspection of tobacco, and for a long time the principal warehouses in Richmond were for that purpose.

The warehouses or "inspections" in Richmond early in the nineteenth century, according to reminiscences by Mordecai, were the Shockoe, a mere cluster of wooden sheds; Byrd's, built of brick, and Rockets, of which the walls were still standing when he wrote fifty years later.

Afterward there were the Powhatan, built near the former location of the wigwam of that monarch, and the public warehouse on the basin.

At first the tobacco was rolled into town in its own hogshead, inspected and stored in the warehouse, and sold on the street. Later the buyers frequented the warehouse itself and, when times were good, bought after inspection and stored it until shipped.

We read that in 1831, for example, 4459 hogsheads of tobacco were delivered from the several State warehouses of Richmond for exportation or manufacture.

In Washington, on the other hand, the early warehouses were of an entirely different character.

Washington, it will be remembered, was a made-to-order city. It was laid out by the Government, and when the Government first moved there, in 1800, had only 3200 inhabitants and was still mostly on paper. It grew slowly and never became a commercial city. In 1850 it had a population of only 40,000, but then began to expand and increased to 75,000 in the next ten years.

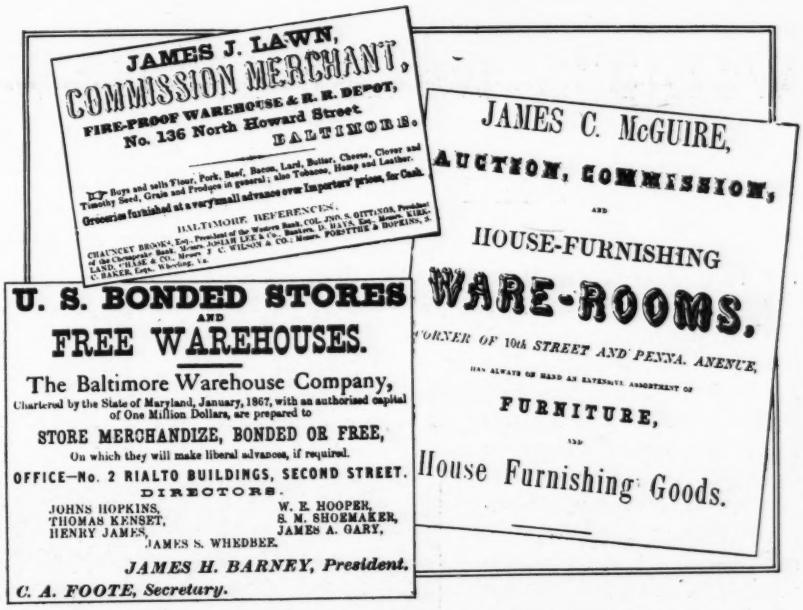

It remained, however, a residential city, where an unusual proportion of the population was transient or intermittent in its residence—there during the sessions of Congress and then away.

Washington in the Fifties

This developed a call for storage warehouses for the safekeeping of household goods, and auction warehouses for their sale. In 1853, for example, appeared an advertisement of J. C. McGuire, who had a warehouse and acted as auctioneer and commission man.

The Jacobs Transfer Co., which still has a warehouse in Washington—on Florida Avenue—was established in 1859, in part to meet the demands created by a seasonal ebb and flow of the population.

During the war, however, Washington became a great national warehouse for supplies for the Army of the Potomac, and every available building was occupied for that or other war purposes. This helped to develop the warehouse idea, and soon after the close of the conflict we find the establishment there of the Washington Market Co., and Littlefield, Alvord & Co., under which name these concerns are still in active operation, the former being a member of the American Warehousemen's Association.

Westward to Wheeling

The route from Baltimore to the West was directed to connect with the Ohio at either Pittsburgh or Wheeling. There was a river water route which could be used part of the way to Pittsburgh, but for goods going down the Ohio, Pittsburgh made a longer trip. As a consequence, after the building of the famous Cumberland Road, through Cumberland Pass, in 1815, Wheeling became for a time a rival of Pittsburgh.

In 1830, when Wheeling was still a small town of 5000 population, the trip by freight wagon from Baltimore to Wheeling required about sixteen days, and the rate ran from 1¾ to 2¾ cents a pound.

A view of this trade is given in an account of 1836, which speaks particularly of the warehouses in Wheeling. This runs in part as follows:

"There are seven commission and forwarding houses for the sale of goods consigned and for receiving, storing and forwarding merchandise and produce. These houses, from Dec. 1, 1835, forwarded eastward 10,587,811 pounds of produce of various descriptions, and, in addition to tobacco alone 3182 hogsheads, making 3,182,000 pounds. Forwarded west and south of produce and merchandise, 56,259,178 pounds. On the merchandise forwarded west there were paid to wagons for carriage from $265,000 to $285,000. In addition a large sum not ascertained was paid to boats for freight."

The most important of these old forwarding and storage concerns seem to have been Dorsey & Tyson, Forsyth & Atterbury, Irwin & Miller, McKee & Harding and Moore & Clarke, the members of which took a prominent part in the development of the upper Ohio region.

In 1850 the Baltimore & Ohio was extended to Wheeling. This increased the storage business in Wheeling as long as the haul was broken there and the goods distributed from there or shipped down the Ohio by steamboat. When the road was extended, however, Wheeling lost its importance as a depot of deposit, although the warehouse business there was encouraged by the Civil War.

The effect of the war on Baltimore, however, was to cut down its trade and demands for warehousing. Its imports from the South were at once stopped and its commerce with the West was intercepted.

The Canton Co., nevertheless, continued to operate, and soon after the war we read of new warehouses such as the United States Bonded Stores and Baltimore Warehouse. A little later were established Graham's Storage Warehouse Co. and the Monumental Storage & Carpet Cleaning Co., which are still in operation and which are members of the National Furniture Warehousemen's Association.

Essex Going Out of Business

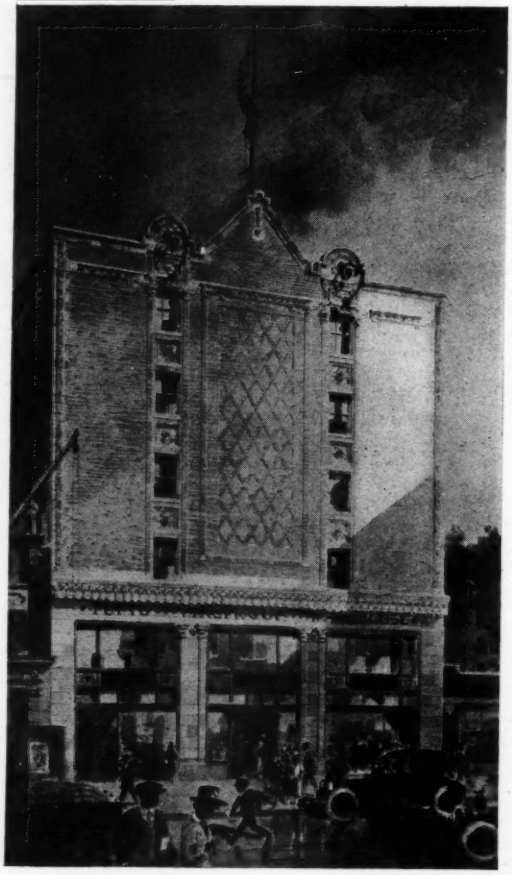

The Essex Warehouse Co., established in 1922 and which has been operating some of the Boston Army Base space, is going out of the public storage business, it is announced by Louis Berman, treasurer and operating executive. The company controlled two merchandise warehouses with a total of 175,000 sq. ft. of floor space.

WHAT'S WHAT IN NEW BUILDINGS

LXXXI

Tufts Express & Van Co.
Chicago

THE Tufts Express & Van Co., Chicago, will soon enter the furniture warehousing business in Chicago, with location in a fireproof structure, six stories and basement in height, on West Madison Street. The building will cover a plot 50 by 100 feet and will contain 35,000 square feet of floor space. It is to be equipped with a large electric freight elevator, a complete system of intercommunicating house telephones, vaults for storage of silver, rugs and trunks, and is to be steam heated throughout by a vacuum system. The roof will be dead level and will be covered with Barrett materials, guaranteed against leaks for a period of twenty years. All requirements of the Fire Underwriters have been observed in the design and construction so that the lowest possible insurance rate may be obtained.

The design of the front exterior is renaissance in detail. The lower stories are faced with a glazed cream-white terra cotta and the upper stories with an impervious face brick of similar color, with terra cotta ornaments, mouldings and cornice. The firm name over the second floor is lighted by electric bulbs concealed under a terra cotta cornice and controlled by an electric automatic clock.

The office is located in the center of the front first floor and is two stories in height, and on either side are stores for retail merchants. The walls and ceilings of the offices are finished in caen stone and the floors finished in terrazzo in a field of alternate black and white squares, with a black terrazzo base and border, which, with the counter top of York fossil marble, produces an harmonious color combination. Entrance to the passenger elevator is at one end of the office, enabling customers who desire access to stored goods to enter the car without leaving the office.

The rear first floor contains the rug vault and the shipping room. The loading shed is in a one-story fireproof building attached to the warehouse and separated from it by brick fire walls and fire doors on each side of each opening. Vans enter the loading shed from an alley in the rear and unload directly on the freight elevator, which has been located at the rear of the warehouse.

The basement contains the boiler room, excelsior room and packing room, which is ventilated to the outside air by means of windows placed under the store bulkheads. In the boiler room is located, in addition to the boiler, a combination hot water heater and refuse burner and a large hot water storage tank.

The upper floors are devoted exclusively to household goods storage. On the second floor is a heated and plastered piano room facing West Madison Street, with display windows in order that passersby may observe how goods are cared for. The rest of this floor is devoted to open storage and the trunk vault. The third and fourth floors are divided into individual rooms with fireproof tile walls and iron doors, each with a padlock. The interior of each room is painted to minimize dust. The two upper floors are devoted to open storage, but the floors have been designed to take care of future needs in the event it is desired to install individual rooms on these floors.

The building was designed by and is being erected under the supervision of George S. Kingsley, architect, of New York and Chicago.

Knacks to a Truck Maintenance Policy

Some Suggestions for a System of Dependable Service with Lower Operating Costs

By PHILIP L. SNIFFIN

EXPERIENCED motor truck operators and those who have been forced to study the responsibilities of maintaining a large fleet of vehicles know that there are many little knacks to a maintenance policy that will help reduce costs.

The same common-sense principles of economy that apply to all phases of a business are equally as important in truck service. But in addition to this there are mechanical and somewhat technical problems to be answered and points to be learned that come usually from costly experience.

This article is devoted to hints and ideas of the kind that will increase the practical value of the warehouse owner's truck system, making more dependable service and lower operating costs.

Many truck operators, for example, neglect to take care in loading to see that the load is evenly balanced on the body. It is often a matter of habit to place the load in one particular position every time. This, of course, causes premature wear on the chassis at that point. It is always best to place the greater part of the load toward the front of the body.

Perhaps you have noticed that most trouble with springs, axles, wheels, tires, etc., is on the right-hand side of the truck. This is because most roads slope on the sides, and, as it is necessary to keep to the right in driving, the right wheels are caused to ride on a lower plane than the left wheels. It is well, for this reason, to take advantage of the full load in open stretches, where it can be done with just consideration for others and to give particular attention to adjustments and general care of the right-hand side of the chassis.

Driving Is Important

IT is not uncommon for the repair bills to be in direct ratio to the number of different people who drive the same truck. Much money can be saved by proper handling and that is why the beginner and extra driver are apt to injure the engine and chassis within a very short time.

Driver "turnover" should be minimized as far as possible and care should be taken not to let an inexperienced driver have charge of a machine.

Driving, to the experienced truck driver, resolves itself into a series of movements which to him have become mechanical. One might say that driving to him is a habit and the operations of accelerating and gear shifting and braking at the proper time are accompanied by little actual thinking. Practice at the wheel and above all adherence to every rule promoting safety have made him a good driver. It is characteristic of the good driver, that he is careful. He drives slowly compared with the beginner; he drives down steep grades in second or first speed; he turns slowly; he starts and stops gradually. All of the things that the experienced driver does are good for him, good for the other users of the road and good for the mechanism of the truck.

Driving up and down grades is, to the experienced driver, no more trouble than driving along a level stretch. There is no need to burn brake lining unnecessarily when going down grade. As a matter of fact many grades do not require the use of brakes at all, although most drivers use them.

There are two forms of resistance which can be put into use to retard the motion of a truck—the brakes, and the engine—when the latter is not firing.

The greater the engine speed when the engine is not firing the greater the resistance it offers so that if the gears are in second speed the car will roll down a hill slower than in high. In first speed the speed will be slower than in second.

The brakes should not be used on long grades unless the truck travels too fast in first speed. Then brakes may be called on merely as auxiliaries.

The next time you have occasion to travel down a steep grade, shift into first speed, turn the ignition switch to "off" position and hold your foot on the brake pedal, but do not apply the brakes. You will find you have the truck under complete control and that the brakes will not do one-tenth the work they formerly were called upon to do.

Regular Inspections

ONCE a month is the interval generally agreed upon by motor truck authorities for minute inspection of equipment. Whether there is any indication of trouble or not, every detail of the truck's mechanism should be gone over carefully by an expert, with the aid of a chart if necessary.

The chart which guides the mechanics in the rigid monthly inspection should

YOUR BUSINESS AND THE MOTOR TRUCK

THIS is the twenty-seventh of a series of articles by Mr. Sniffin in relation to motor truck operation and deals with the economics of maintenance, considering such fundamentals as proper loading, care by drivers, regular inspection, conservation of tires and wheels, lubrication of brakes, etc.

Formerly with the International Motor Co., Mr. Sniffin, a motor truck advisory engineer, is a recognized authority on motor truck topics. He has been making a special study of truck operation in relation to the public storage industry in order to write these articles.

have every item and part of the truck listed, and they should be arranged in logical sequence. It should commence with the bumper, hood, cover, starting crank, compression, pistons, and so on down the line to the license bracket and tail light, so that the inspector beginning at the front end of the truck may examine every part in order without retracing a step. This arrangement makes for speed in inspection, without detracting from thoroughness.

The truck owner who operates his own motor truck repair shop should make sure that his supply department orders only the genuine manufacturers' parts when replacements are to be made. It is a strong temptation to use imitation or so-called "pirate parts" which are on the market and which are obtainable usually at lower cost than the genuine parts.

If the truck is taken to a public garage or service station to have such work done be sure that the concern is reliable and always insist that manufacturers' parts be used.

The manufacturer knows what kind of parts suit his truck better than does anyone else. "Pirate parts" generally cost a few cents less to buy than genuine parts; but in the finish, if you use the "pirate part" you will more than pay for the difference in the trouble and expense you will have later on when the inferior part begins to wear.

Another reason why you should buy only genuine parts is the fact that manufacturers from time to time find it necessary to make changes, in dimensions on certain parts, which cannot be followed by the imitation parts manufacturer, and if these "pirate parts" are used, trouble is sure to result.

Care of Tires

AN item of no small importance in the total cost of operating motor trucks is that of tires. The life of tires can be greatly prolonged and their part of the operating expense materially reduced if they are given proper treatment in everyday use. The following ten points are especially important:

1. Don't overload. Overloading stresses the tires beyond their elastic limit, destroying the life of the rubber and the durability and cushioning quality of the tires.

2. Don't overspeed. Excess speed magnifies the impact of the tire on road bumps and causes overheating.

3. Don't run in car tracks, as this cuts the tires by centering the pressure at one point instead of evenly over the tread. The edges of the rails, particularly the guard flanges of street car tracks, are very sharp, and running rubber tires over them is much like running them over the edges of steel knives.

4. Don't spin the wheels or permit them to run out of line on account of a bent axle. Many drivers speed up their engines under the erroneous impression that this will increase traction. The slower a wheel turns, the better traction it has. The more gently it is turned, the less liable it is to slip.

5. Avoid skidding. In applying the brakes, the wheels should not slide. Not only does sliding the wheels damage the tires but it reduces the braking effect. Quicker action is secured when the wheels barely turn and the abrasion on the tires is least. Don't turn corners at such a speed that the wheels skid, and don't bring truck to a stop by sliding the wheels.

6. Slivers on solid tires should be promptly cut off as soon as they appear. If the sliver is left on it will contribute nothing to the strength of the tire but will continue to flap, and the tear will extend until half the tread is torn loose.

7. Most anti-skid devices are very hard on tires. Don't use them unless it is absolutely necessary, and then be sure they are correctly applied.

8. Bad roads are obviously injurious to tires. On a road with a rough surface the tire rests successively on irregularities, which have the effect of overloading that particular portion of the tire.

9. To avoid unnecessary strain on pneumatics, or flat spots on solids, lift the truck weight from the tires by raising on jacks when the truck is to be idle any considerable length of time.

10. With pneumatic tires it is important to know your inflation pressures. Proper inflation pressure is as necessary as proper loads and speeds.

Watch Wheels

A CRACKING sound coming from the hub of a motor truck indicates something wrong in the wheel bearings. Unless this is promptly attended to, a burned-up wheel bearing may result and there is danger of what drivers call a "hot box," which is likely to lock the wheel on to the axle or burn the axle in half, permitting the wheel to roll off. Imagine what would happen if this should occur on a down grade with a heavily loaded truck.

When this cracking sound from the hub becomes audible the driver should put his hand on the hub and if he finds it hot he should carefully examine the bearings. Probably he will find a couple of the rollers cracked or broken. If this is so he should drive slowly and carefully to the nearest place where they can be replaced.

Operators of motor trucks which are equipped with wood wheels must not neglect to give them an occasional coat of paint to preserve the wood grain from the elements. The wheels on a truck are exposed to thousands of road jolts in every mile traveled. They are called upon to absorb shocks to a greater extent than are most other parts of the truck. The current slogan fostered by paint manufacturers, "Save the surface and you save all," has no better application than to wood wheels on a motor truck.

Brake Lubrication and Relining

FEW truck operators understand the manner in which brakes require lubrication. When the bearing surfaces of the brakes are not regularly lubricated they will tend to bind, due to the action of rust and dirt. Eventually this will cause premature wear of the lining, and the added friction will increase the work required of the engine. The mechanism of the brakes should be oiled regularly, as well as the brake tubes which operate on the rear axle housing. All brake adjustments should be made by an experienced mechanic.

Dirt and grit in the brake lining will cause squeaking and chattering sounds to develop. The brake bands should be removed when this symptom occurs, and the lining cleaned by scrubbing with a wire brush and kerosene.

Often, when the grit is difficult to remove, a mixture of powdered resin and castor oil applied to the lining will remedy this.

The squeaking of brakes may be stopped temporarily by spraying water between the brake surfaces and the brake lining will usually be improved by the wetting.

It is important, of course, to replace the linings when they have been worn to the point where the rivet heads touch the drums.

Relining the brakes on a motor truck is a simple enough job after the owner has once mastered the details. Do not be persuaded to invest in cheap brake lining any more than you would buy cheap rope for use on Alpine glaciers. Your life depends upon the action of the brakes and the best lining is none too good. The best will cost only a little more than the cheapest for the whole set of brakes, and the few pennies gained are not worth the risk involved. Cheap linings will also wear out much faster than the first quality. With the former, you will have to repeat the relining process often, while the superior quality will in most cases last an entire year.

Look for Gasket Trouble

MANY defects which occur in truck engines, when finally they are traced, show that they were caused by weak or poorly fitted gaskets. Gaskets are made of various materials, such as heavy oiled paper, asbestos, rubber, and a combination of asbestos and copper. The material used depends upon the place on the engine where the gasket is to be fitted and whether heat is present. Heated portions of the engine require a gasket that will successfully withstand high temperatures, and copper asbestos gaskets have been found best for the purpose.

When the parts between which a gasket has been used are separated, gaskets sometimes blow out. Their replacement is thus quite frequently required, especially when parts have been disassembled.

Leaky gaskets cause defects similar to carburetion and ignition troubles, and often lead the repairer to believe that these latter units are at fault when in reality leaking gaskets are causing the trouble. Compression will escape through a poorly fitting head gasket and lubricant will be lost if the gasket and fastening bolts are not drawn tight. Water may enter the lubricating system, the exhaust becomes noisy and many other defects may occur that can be directly laid to poor fitting or blownout gaskets, er and often result in serious injury to which cause annoyance to the truck own- the parts.

Electrical System

A TRUCK owner does not necessarily have to be an electrician in order to understand the workings of the electrical part of his motor truck. And a little study applied to this will generally enable the operator to tell when the magneto, battery, or other components are not functioning properly.

The electrical system of a motor truck may be compared with the plumbing in a modern house. Take, for instance, a house located in a city. The plumbing for such a house can readily be connected with the local water supply. In the same way, if a motor truck was to be used in a stationary location it would be a simple matter to connect it to the local supply of current for lighting, starting and ignition.

But in a country house where there is no source of running water supply a pump and supply tank must be provided to convey the water from the well from which it is to be drawn. Just as water will not flow unless it is pushed, neither will electricity flow unless some means are provided to push it along the wire.

So, with this in mind, the pump in a country house may be likened to the generator on a motor truck, and the supply tank may be likened to the storage battery.

Again, in a country house, in order to prevent the water from flowing back through the pump to the well, a check valve must be provided which closes when the pump is stopped. Similarly, a circuit breaker or cut-out in a motor truck's wiring prevents the electricity, which has been pumped or charged in the storage battery from flowing back into the generator when the engine is shut down.

Just as the water system in a house is generally provided with a meter to measure the water as it flows, so the wiring of a truck has an ammeter which registers the flow and shows just how much electricity is being pumped when the generator is running. This ammeter indicates also the amount of electricity that is drawn from the storage battery when the engine is stopped.

When the supply tank in a house is empty no water can be drawn from any of the faucets, and likewise when a truck's storage battery is completely exhausted no electricity is available.

One of the chief reasons why battery current is not depended on for truck ignition is because a battery may run down, just as a water tank may become empty, and it is necessary for a truck to have a supply of current for ignition which is absolutely reliable at all times. Consequently the truck is supplied with an independent source of electricity for ignition only, furnished by an instrument known as a magneto, which will keep the engine running even if the battery were exhausted.

The supply of electricity for the ignition of the engine must have greater pressure than that supplied by the generator and storage battery for starting and lighting. The power in a gasoline engine is supplied by a series of explosions taking place in each cylinder in its proper time. Therefore we must have an apparatus that will cause these intermittent explosions to take place unfailingly and at the right moment. That is the function of the magneto.

The magneto supplies electricity in the form of a hot spark, just at the time when it is needed to set fire to the mixture of gasoline and air compressed in the cylinders of the engine. The power to drive the magneto is taken from the engine of the truck by means of gears. All magnetos have several permanent magnets which influence a winding in the form of a coil or armature in such a way as to produce electricity when the magneto is rotated.

When current is produced by the magneto it is necessary to increase the pressure in it so as to enable it to jump the gap in the spark plug. The means of increasing the pressure can be readily understood by comparing the flow of electricity with the flow of water.

A stream of water from an ordinary garden hose, say one inch in diameter, will carry only a few feet. However, if we squeeze the end of the hose so that the stream is no thicker than a lead pencil, we will find that we can throw this stream of water a considerable distance.

In a magneto we do very much the same thing. We take a large amount of electricity and suddenly shoot it through a long thin copper wire and thus get it up to the necessary pressure or voltage.

The magneto in order to deliver its current at the proper moment has a part commonly called a breaker. The function of this part is periodically to break or interrupt the flow of electricity. At the moment of passing through the breaker the electricity is transferred to the long, thin wire in the magneto known as the high tension winding. Finally it appears at the plug in the form of a spark.

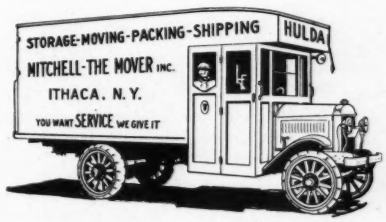

The only function of the magneto is to supply electricity of a sufficient pressure or voltage to jump the gap of the spark plugs, yet the magneto is often blamed when some defect in the wiring or spark plugs is at fault. The present day magneto is a simple, hard-working instrument which will give good and lasting service if oiled regularly but sparingly at the bearings, kept clean, and then left alone.

Good Morning, Hulda! Or—What's In a Name?

WILL pinning a definite name to a motor van bring the furniture warehouse company new business? William J. Mitchell, president of Mitchell-the-Mover, Inc., Ithaca, N. Y., thinks so. One of the Mitchell vans bears the name "Hulda"—and Mr. Mitchell says it is good advertising for his firm.

"We have," to quote the Ithaca warehouseman, "a covered motor van which we have named 'Hulda' and on the front of the cab, over the driver's seat, we have had this name, 'Hulda,' painted in large letters. From the comments, compliments, and so on, which we have received, regarding the naming of this truck, we are sure it is good advertising and has brought us in business.

"We have received lots of orders by telephone and otherwise in which the people have told us they would like to have 'Hulda' move them. We have received letters with the envelopes addressed 'Hulda, Ithaca, N. Y.' People around the city always talk about it by name the same as they would a person, and even I have been called 'Hulda' by lots of people. Some time ago a request was received from a distant city asking for a moving date, the writer saying he had seen a big truck go through and had remembered its name but had forgetten the name of the firm. Once the Newark, N. J., Evening News had the following to say about it:

"'Out in Ithaca the pretty custom of applying names to possessions held in fond regard extends, apparently, beyond summer bungalows and motor boats. A van owned by Mitchell-the-Mover, Inc., of that town bears, as was noticed when it passed through Newark, the name "Hulda" painted near the "bow."'

"We have always realized that the appearance of our trucks and rigs had a great advertising value and therefore we have kept them all looking good. They are all painted orange color, with black lettering and trimming."

WITH THE ASSOCIATIONS

Hoover Tells How Trade Associations Promote Elimination of Waste

ONE of the most important agencies through which the elimination of waste may be promoted is the trade association, Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, says in his annual report covering the past year.

"It is true," the report says, "that a small minority of these associations have been in the past used as cloaks for restraint of trade by such activities as open-price associations and other attempts to control distribution or prices. It is equally true that the vast majority of trade associations have no such purpose and do no such things. The dividing line, however, between what activities are in the public interest and what are not in the public interest is not today clearly defined either by the law or by Court decision. In consequence of recent decisions of the Courts, many associations are fearful of proceeding with work of vital public importance, and we are losing the value of much admirable activity. At the same time we are keeping alive the possibility of wrongful acts. It is imperative that some definition should be made by which an assurance of legality in proper conduct can be had, and by which illegality or improper conduct may be more vigorously attacked.

"In the elimination of waste, trade associations have been among the most constructive agencies of the country, and will be far more so if the solution can be found to the above question. Their waste elimination activities extend in many directions, of which the following are but a part:

"1. Collection and distribution of statistics as to actual production, capacity production, stocks on hand, shipments, orders on hand, cancellations, number of employees, and such other data as will enable the industry and its consumers intelligently to judge future demands and supply.

Credit—Trade Disputes

"2. Elimination of waste and reductions in cost of production and distribution by standardizing sizes and types, eliminating excess varieties, and establishing grades and qualities, thus reducing the amount of stocks thrust upon the retailer and at the same time enabling factories to operate more regularly to stocks of standard requirements.

"3. Elimination of misdirected credit and aid in the collection of accounts.

"4. Provision for the settlement of trade disputes by arbitration.

"5. Stamping out of unfair practices and misrepresentation in business or as to goods.

"6. Promotion of the welfare of employees, by the improvement of working conditions, sanitation, safety appliances, accident prevention, housing conditions, and matters of like character.

"7. Economy in insurance by handling that of all members, including fire, industrial, indemnity, or group insurance.

"8. Economies in transportation through common agencies for settlement of rate matters, classification, car supply, auditing transportation bills, and the study of competitive transportation agencies.

"9. Elimination of waste in processes by the establishment of laboratories for technical and scientific research."

The report continues:

Statistical Knowledge Wanted

"Instances of the injury incurred because of lack of such activities could be recited in great numbers. Gigantic loss to the public and to the rubber and fertilizer trades in 1921 was in large measure due to the absence of statistical knowledge of stocks of raw material which had been imported into the country at that time. The instability of the bituminous coal industry, and the constant disintegration of its employers' associations through fear of the restraint-of-trade Acts, contributed directly to their refusal to enter into negotiations with the unionized miners in 1922, and bears some share of responsibility for the long strife which then ensued.

"Any collective activity can be used as a smoke screen to cover conspiracy against the public interest, but that is no reason for condemning all collective activities. Just because automobiles are sometimes used by bootleggers for the illegal transportation of liquor we do not prohibit their manufacture or their legitimate use. Probably the most compelling reason for maintaining proper trade associations lies in the fact that through them small business is given facilities more or less equivalent to those which big business can accumulate for itself.

"Properly directed, this kind of activity is one of the strongest forces for the maintenance of competitive action. No one would advocate any amendment to the law that would sooner or later create monopoly, price fixing, domination or unfair practices, or any of the category of collective action detrimental to public interest. There is a vast difference between the whole social conception of capital combinations against public interest and cooperative organization profoundly in public interest. The former extinguishes individualism, legitimizes and fosters monopoly, dams up our economic channels, all of which penalize the consumer and make for less efficiency in production. The latter encourages individualism, fosters competition and initiative, resulting in efficient service and reasonable prices to the consumer.

"Legislative definition of these matters has been given to the farmer and to labor, and I am convinced that the time has come when definition should be extended to those engaged in industry, trade, and commerce, particularly in the interest of maintaining the small business unit. The department has made definite proposals in this direction which it believes in no way open the door for illegal activities, and yet make provision for the maintenance of activities which it is in the public interest to encourage."

U. S. Chamber Defines to Mr. Coolidge Its Policy on Trade Associations

IN a statement which the Chamber of Commerce of the United States has placed before President Coolidge, setting out principles upon which the Chamber lays emphasis as being especially timely, is included a "declaration of a policy regarding trade associations."

For the reason that trade associations "form about one-third of the constituent membership of the Chamber" the latter has, the statement says, "a special interest" in the subject, and this special interest includes a belief that such organizations, legitimately conducted, "are an essential element to the promotion of American business" and that legislation "which would make them impossible, or make it impossible for them to function properly, would hinder not only industry but also the prosperity of nations."

Text of Declaration

The Chamber's declaration continues:

"In connection with the Sherman Act prosecuting authorities of the Government have proceeded in such a way as to cause doubt in the public mind, not only as to the trade associations against which action has been instituted, but as to trade associations against which apparently no action whatever has been contemplated.

"The consequences are serious. Organizations and individuals against whom no accusation under existing law has been brought or is in contemplation are subjected to the injustice of being viewed with suspicion by the public.

"This is destructive of trade organizations. It takes constant effort to keep trade associations representative and vigorous. When suspicion is unjustifiedly directed at an association, its members leave it. There is rapid disintegration.

"The Chamber holds no brief for trade associations that infringe the law, nor is it desirous of criticizing the action of the authorities in regard to these offenders. It is simply recognizing and pointing out the facts with a desire of remedying a situation which is already tending to hinder the development of business.

"Trade associations serve a very useful purpose which is generally overlooked. In the prosecution of trade associations the public, and perhaps to some extent the authorities, regard the trade associations as representing corporations with huge accumulations of capital. The fact is that the larger and richer the corporation, the less its needs for a trade association. It has, in itself, the means of obtaining all of the information which it needs in order successfully to compete.

"Not so with the smaller concerns. They cannot afford, except through pooling through a trade association, to secure this business data at their own expense.

"The membership of the national Chamber, through a referendum vote, has made the following recommendations regarding the use of statistics by trade associations:

" '1. Statistics of capacity, production, stock and sales, and statistics of actual prices in closed transactions, should be collected by a trade association for its industry or branch of commerce.

" '2. Such statistics should be distributed without any comment or interpretation which could induce or facilitate concerted action on the part of members.

" '3. The statistics should be made as available by a trade association to the public and Government agencies as to the members of the association.'

"It is the duty of the Chamber's board of directors to advocate the carrying into effect of these recommendations. In so doing it has to consider, not its own opinion of the legality of the activities which are included, but the attitude of the Government and its officials who have relations to the question. If it is forced to a conclusion that the view is held in Government circles that there is illegality in activities the Chamber's members have declared are desirable, it must consider seeking from Congress such minor amendments as will affirmatively permit the activities it advocates.

"Parenthetically, it may be added that obviously the Chamber does not seek repeal of the Sherman law."

Other Policies

The foregoing principle as to trade associations is part of "the position of American business on important current national economic questions" as put before President Coolidge by the national Chamber. A summary of the other recommendations follows:

1. The Chamber is against the making public of Federal income tax returns.
2. The Chamber urges the creation of a National Tax Commission.
3. The Chamber advocates the establishment and carrying out of a merchant marine policy.
4. The Chamber asks for a comprehensive survey looking toward the development of inland waterways.
5. The Chamber is against the Howell-Barkley bill, on the theory that the principles embodied in the labor provisions of the Transportation Act establishing the Railway Labor Board are sound.
6. The Chamber favors the setting up of an Immigration Commission, to recommend and administer legislation.
7. The Chamber approves extension of the Government's budget system.

Pacific Coast Furniture Warehousemen's Assoc.

Pool Car Policy

FINAL settlement of the system of pooling car shipments was made at the November meeting of the northern division of the Pacific Coast Furniture Warehousemen's Association, held in San Francisco on the 8th.

The need for uniformity in pooling car shipments had been placed before the association several times before, but each time the members asked for more time for consideration. Reed J. Bekins, San Francisco, president of the division, brought the question up at this meeting for some sort of definite action. It was settled by the association that the present system of pooling cars should be continued.

Considerable discussion preceded the decision. Harvey Lyon, Oakland, stated he was more than willing to cooperate with the members and abide by any decision they might make, but that, in his mind, pooling of car shipments was legitimate and perfectly ethical in the warehousing business. He conceded that the actual saving in money was not the big factor. He called attention to the facilitation of handling shipments by different warehousemen where they could pool shipments. Added service to the public would more than justify such pools, in his opinion.

Mr. Bekins said that although he was looking at the subject from the viewpoint of a forwarding company he believed better service could be rendered by warehousemen, in the long run, by eliminating pools. He cited the example of a shipment from a firm in Spokane to Los Angeles, with 16,000 lb. for Oakland and 10,000 lb. for Los Angeles. Mr. Bekins asserted that the Spokane firm would be taking the chance of having the car sent on to Los Angeles only partly filled if the Oakland firm to whom it shipped should be unable to fill the remainder. On the other hand, if the Spokane company shipped the carload through a regular forwarding company it would know exactly the charges on the car before the goods left Spokane.

Mr. Lyon said that cars consigned to him were never sent on without adding at least as much tonnage as was taken out. He reiterated his intention of abiding by the will of the remainder of the members of the organization.

After various members had stated that they were in favor of continuing the system of pooling car shipments as now conducted, Mr. Bekins said the pooling of car shipments would be considered as being the general sentiment of the association and adopted as such.

Mr. Cramer of the firm of Cass & Johansin, insurance brokers in Los Angeles, was introduced and said he was there to answer questions which might have arisen in the minds of members. He is making a trip through the United States, visiting all warehousemen who are members of the National Furniture Warehousemen's Association in an effort to sign them up for the new insurance.

The question was raised as to whether Cass & Johansin would maintain offices in the principal cities to handle warehousemen's business. Mr. Cramer said warehousemen would settle all claims, making out drafts which the insurance company will pay.

"The point which has arisen explains to a great extent why we are able to offer such low rates," Mr. Cramer continued. "Our overhead expenses are cut down to a minimum by allowing the individual warehouseman to settle his own claims. Another factor is the fact that every warehouseman in the United States is selling premiums. The tremendous volume of business done makes it possible to cut down still further on rates.

"One thing to be emphasized is that a firm must be a member of the National association before it can secure this insurance. This provision should prove a material help to your association when going after new members."

Neglect of so many companies in securing releases on goods by the owners was pointed out by Mr. Cramer. He said warehouse companies with only a few thousands capital will send out a truck with $10,000 worth of goods on it with no release from the owner, while railroad companies, with millions of capital, refuse to move one pound without a release.

John R. Driver, Berkeley, summarized the situation, as the warehousemen see it, with the remark that "we will now be able to write the sort of insurance that the public think they have been getting."

Estimating

A motion was offered that the action taken by the southern division (see December issue of Distribution & Warehousing) on the subject of a standard method of estimating be indorsed by the northern division. Harvey Lyon pointed out the need for some way of estimating on jobs that would be fair to the other warehousemen, to the warehousemen making the estimates, and to the public. The present method of estimating should not be discouraged, Mr. Lyon believed, but conservatism should be both preached and practised and the aim should be to get at an exact estimate, not by contracting, but by careful work of agents.

General discussion brought out that the members generally felt that a standard form of estimating should be adopted. An honest attempt on the part of every agent estimating on a job is no doubt made, but the element of human error is always present.

An instance was given where much trouble resulted because of an agent's making an estimate too low to cover the cost of the job. The original packer, in Buffalo, N. Y., had given a customer moving to Berkeley an estimate of $100, when the job was first looked over and figured on. The customer accepted this amount and left the matter in the hands of the Buffalo firm. When the goods arrived in Berkeley the warehouse handling them there received a bill of $150. The customer complained, stating that the original figure was $100. The Buffalo firm refused to accept the loss, and the party to whom the goods were consigned refused to pay more than the amount they had agreed. The situation was finally adjusted to the satisfaction of all concerned, but with a standard method of estimating such an occurrence would have been virtually impossible.

The motion indorsing the adoption of standard means of estimating was voted on and carried.

A letter was read from the National association explaining the standard system of accounting, and Mr. Bekins asked for expression of views.

John R. Driver told the meeting his firm had recently installed a complete system of accounting of its own and would hesitate to change at this time.

Massachusetts Warehousemen's Association

Monthly Meeting

ABOUT thirty members attended the November meeting and luncheon of the Massachusetts Warehousemen's Association at the Exchange Club. The after-dinner discussion was led by George S. Lovejoy, president.

Gardner Poole, president of the American Warehousemen's Association, alluded to the joint convention of the A.W.A. and the Central Warehousemen's Club in Chicago in December and predicted a record attendance from all over the country.

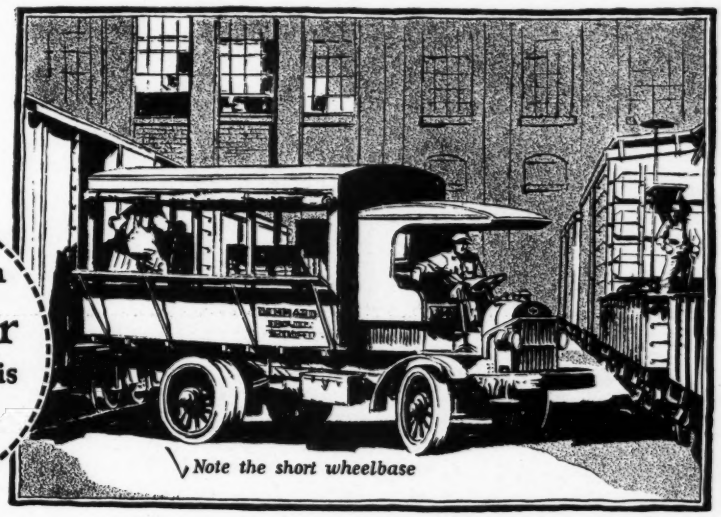

Anson M. Titus, secretary, announced that copies of the proposed uniform bill governing motor transportation over all public highways of the United States, and which is being advocated by the National Furniture Warehousemen's Association and other interests, can be had by making application to him. He said that there were many articles in the proposed bill that merited the attention of individuals and organizations engaged in this form of transportation.

The storage of "Strike Anywhere Matches," now prohibited by insurance interests in stipulated warehouses, was generally discussed by many members, including President Lovejoy, who introduced the question.

The over, short and damage report included in standard warehouse forms adopted by the American Warehousemen's Association, Secretary Titus announced, had drawn certain protests from manufacturers and shippers because it contains the clause "How loaded, stowed and braced." It was predicted that this point would be satisfactorily adjusted.—S. F. Holland.

Autocars save time and money hauling furniture from freight car to warehouse

The 2 to 3 ton 4 cylinder Autocar (wheelbase 114 inches) turning circle is only 38 feet in diameter

Note the short wheelbase

AUTOCAR short wheelbase saves valuable time at freight terminals and loading platforms. And when threading its way through traffic the minutes saved lengthen the work day of your truck. At night, too, the Autocar requires a minimum amount of valuable garage space.

This short wheelbase design makes it possible to haul bulky loads of furniture and still keep within a low overall length. More even weight distribution on all four wheels promotes further economy of operation and maintenance.

He said his system differed in only a few essentials from that of the National, yet differed enough to make it useless if the National's was adopted.

Mr. Bekins outlined the system used by his own firm and said it was satisfactory. He added, however, that there was no question but that at least 75 per cent of the warehousemen of the United States were conducting their accounting in a haphazard way that would stand much improvement.

Attempt to gain uniformity and a determination of costs throughout the country were given by Mr. Lyon as the dominating motives of the National in submitting the standard plan.

Mr. Bekins said that the letter from the National requested him to appoint a committee to investigate methods of accounting now in use among the northern division's members and to recommend whether a change was desirable. He confessed that he was unable to appoint a committee which could give the time needed for such an important survey. The subject was then dropped.

Connecticut Warehousemen's Association

100 Per Cent Attendance

A MEMBERSHIP attendance for other storage trade organizations to shoot at was disclosed at the November meeting, held in Hartford, of the Connecticut Warehousemen's Association. Since the Nutmeg State body was organized in July, 1922, the attendance at the regular monthly meetings has averaged 80 per cent. At the November gathering in Hartford there were twenty-seven representatives of all member companies in nine Connecticut cities—an attendance of 100 per cent. These members have to travel from 40 to 160 miles monthly in order to attend the various meetings, which are held in different cities.

At the November meeting the association adopted a seal; listened to an address by Mayor Norman Stevens of Hartford; inspected an Iredale piano rack in the plant of the association's president, E. G. Mooney, president of the Hartford Despatch & Warehouse Co. and discussed business conditions. The members were optimistic regarding the outlook for 1925.

As Advertised!

"Showers for workmen."

George A. Rutherford, president of the Lincoln Storage Co., Cleveland, reports that the foregoing advertisement, which has been used in connection with the new branch warehouse of the firm on Cedar Road, has brought results and from the unexpected sources.

As evidence he tells of a man who came to the branch warehouse late Saturday afternoon, carrying with him a towel and a cake of soap. The man told the watchman he had seen the advertisement "showers for workmen." It being Saturday and thus the prescribed day for a bath, he had decided to take advantage of the Lincoln offer of a bath.

When the watchman started to explain that the statement applied to men employed by the Lincoln, it is reported that Mr. Rutherford happened to be on the scene. Not wanting to disappoint the worker he had the facilities of the wash rooms turned over to the man, who thus got his desired bath.

And that is not all. Small boys who vigorously shun the bath tub have many of them gone to all extremes in order to get into the water of a clear little pool on the property of the Lincoln branch immediately in front of the building. Nor do they bring a towel or soap, but take their swim much as did Adam in the old days.

"There is no question but that the public believes in what advertisements say," says Mr. Rutherford.

PROSPERITY PREDICTED FOR INDUSTRY IN 1925

State Warehousemen's Association and president of the King Storage Warehouse, Inc., Syracuse—

"Indications for merchandise business 1925 here generally good. Expect some seasonable slowing up in first two months plus some retarding effects due to slight industrial depression. Furniture business slow. Do not look for much improvement until spring. Lower rents and abundance of building during the past year will have retarding effects."

Increased Buying Power

W. Lee Cotter, president of the Ohio Warehousemen's Association and president of the W. Lee Cotter Warehouse Co., Mansfield—

"Direct distribution will be good in 1925 because of increased buying power. Storage space may not be filled until late in the year owing to brisk demand on commodities. Storage space may not be filled to capacity until business of country exceeds transportation facilities."

W. H. Protzman, president of the Pennsylvania Furniture Warehousemen's Association and secretary of the 20th Century Storage Warehouse Co., Philadelphia—

"The general upward trend of business should carry our industry along to a good year in 1925 in Philadelphia. Due largely to a surplus of new homes, furniture storage does not look so encouraging. Local and long distance moving prospects good."

PRICELESS SCREEN IS PROTECTED BY DOUGH!

AN instance of the resourcefulness a storage man is called upon to display is exemplified by an unusual order placed with and carried out successfully by George E. Butler, general manager for the O. K. Storage & Warehouse Co., New Orleans.

A client had a large shipment of household goods destined for Japan. Among his possessions was a rare and priceless screen of hand-carved ivory. Its design was so intricate and delicate that the least jolt would shatter the fragile lace work. It is apparent to the storage man that here is a problem worthy of his ingenuity.

The screen stands six feet tall and each of the three panels is four feet wide. Mr. Butler ordered a box, large enough to accommodate the screen, with a little leeway at the sides and bottom. Then he had a paddle whittled out of a pine board, and bought a tub. Then he bought ten 24-pound sacks of flour and proceeded to make one of the most unusual batches of dough that was ever made.

When the dough was of the proper consistency, he put a layer of it in the bottom of the box and placed one section of the screen on it; next came another layer of dough on top of the section, and another panel folded snugly in place. A protecting layer was placed on this panel and the final one folded, and the top layer of dough applied. Then he jammed dough in the sides, top and bottom of the screen, let the mixture "set," triumphantly nailed the lid down and carted it away to the steamship.

Mr. Butler has just received a letter from the satisfied client, now living in Japan, who said when the screen was taken from its cast of dough it was in even better shape than before; for the dough had acted as a cleanser, and had reached crevices in the intricate design that even artists had feared to attempt to clean.

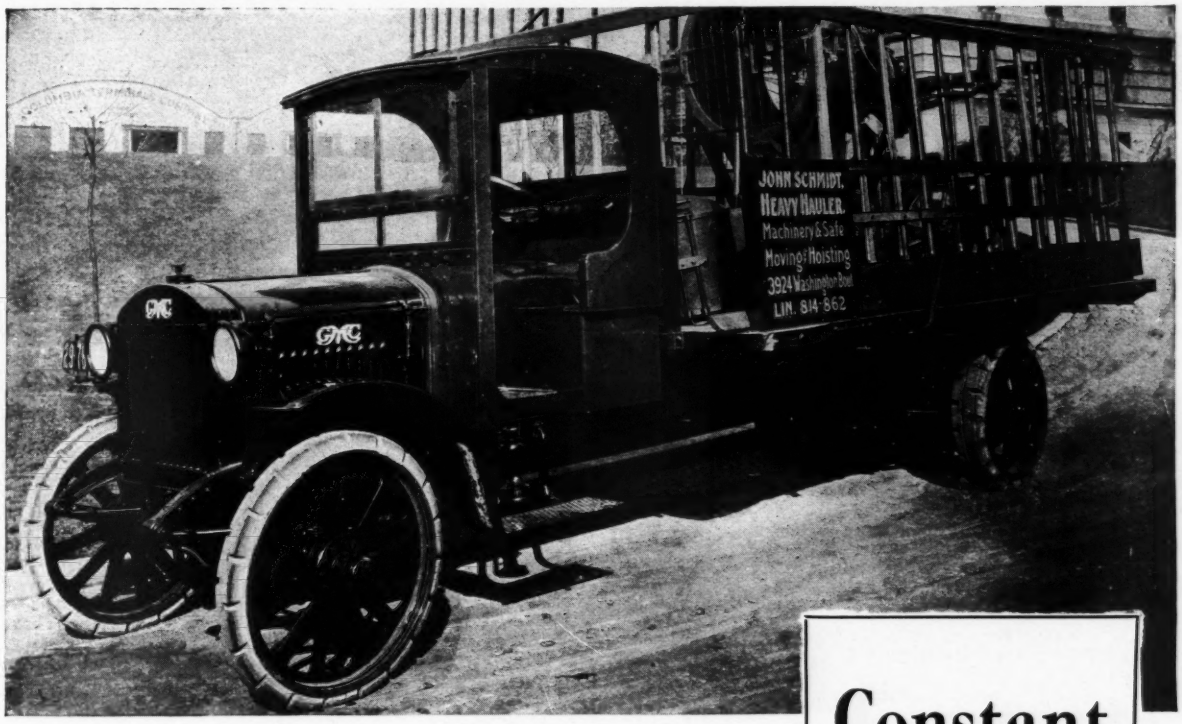

Los Angeles Warehouse Space

A survey made recently by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce shows that ninety-one warehouses are operating approximately 5,500,000 square feet of floor space, roughly divided as follows:

Commercial storage, 29 warehouses, 2,564,500 sq. ft.; private goods, 5 warehouses, 440,400 sq. ft.; household goods, furniture storage, etc., 42 warehouses, 1,690,384 sq. ft. Five warehouses are under construction, to be available not later than Feb. 1. Three of these, with 540,000 sq. ft., are commercial; the others, with 213,000 sq. ft., are for household goods. When they are completed the total storage space in the city will be 5,488,284 sq. ft.

The survey shows that 43 carloads of furniture were delivered to Los Angeles in August, 61 in September and 82 in October, and that all were released within the customary free time of forty-eight hours.

Constant Service

A GMC Truck produces more revenue because of the many features of GMC design which resist wear. Truck time is money and a GMC wastes neither its time nor your money loafing around the repair shop.

These are some of the reasons: all GMC parts are designed overstrength; GMC engines have positive pressure lubrication; GMC clutch is multiple disc —oversize—driving plates of saw steel.

All GMC models of two tons and over have heat treated frames and the now-famous GMC Two Range Transmission. This transmission saves wear and tear on the whole chassis by providing a lower-than-low speed for heavy pulling—without any sacrifice of economy or regular speeds.

GMC design provides a truck that is able to give constant attention to its job and thereby place its operating cost at the lowest low, its earning power at the highest high. Send for a GMC catalog.

OHIO MOTOR TAX LAW HELD CONSTITUTIONAL

A DECISION of far-reaching effect was handed down by the Ohio Supreme Court Nov. 25 when it declared constitutional the amendment to the motor truck taxation law, adopted by the Ohio Legislature in 1923, defining fees for the operation of motor trucks in Ohio. The constitutionality of the law had been questioned in two suits brought up from the Common Pleas Court of Franklin County by the Ohio Automobile Trade Association, the Ohio Association of Commercial Haulers, the Ohio Contractors Association and a local truck committee from Cincinnati.

1919 Act Upheld

In 1919 the Ohio Legislature divided motor vehicles into three classes, based on horsepower rating. The first class consisted of motors with 25 hp. and under; the second class 25 to 35 hp.; and the third class, above 35 hp. There was an additional tax of 20 cents per hundred pounds of gross weight on commercial cars. This Act was held constitutional by the Ohio Supreme Court in Saviers vs. Smith, brought up at that time.

In 1923 the Ohio Legislature, going much farther, exacted an additional tax from commercial cars under the jurisdiction of the Ohio Utilities Commission. In an effort to increase the tax on all commercial cars it amended the horsepower section by increasing the weight tax on commercial cars, and changing the division line between second and third classes from 35 to 30 hp. This divided the natural classification of the average heavy truck of from 3 to 5 tons capacity directly in half, taxing those on one side of the line three times as much as those on the other side of the division.

The Fisher Bros. Co., Cleveland, a grocery concern, in a case directed against T. H. Brown, Secretary of State, and prosecuted by the Ohio Motor Truck Club, attacked the constitutionality of the entire registration law of 1919, applying to all motor vehicles, and also the constitutionality of the motor transportation Act, on the grounds of usurpation of the home rule right of municipalities. improper levy and distribution of taxes, etc.

Pleas Court Decision

In view of the use of horsepower having been held unconstitutional in the case of Saviers vs. Smith, and of the natural inclination of any Court to prevent a loss of revenue to the State, the Foltz Grocery & Baking Co. of Cincinnati also directed an action against Secretary of State Brown, prosecuted by the Ohio Automotive Trade Association, the Ohio Association of Commercial Haulers, and a local truck committee of Cincinnati, attacking the constitutionality only of the amendment of 1923 on the ground that the new classification thereby established, taxing one half of the same class of trucks three times as much as the other half, was unreasonable, discriminatory and in violation of both the State and Federal constitutions.

The success of this contention would have placed the former law of 1919 again in full effect without denying the State just taxes for the repair of streets and highways.

The Common Pleas Court found in favor of this contention, but the Court of Appeals did not agree, stating that it hesitated to hold the Act unconstitutional in view of the Saviers vs. Smith ruling, and indicated that the question was one for the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court has now held against both the Foltz and Fisher cases in their entirety, holding that the Act is entirely constitutional and that any remedy because of certain alleged discrimination lies with the Legislature.

The effect of the decision is to uphold the constitutionality by the use of the Society of Automotive Engineers rating as a basis for a special excise privilege tax on all classes of motor vehicles.

The effect of the decision will be also to reopen the controversy when the General Assembly is convened, as the business interest employing trucks of certain kinds in their business feel that the law discriminates against them.

THIS FISH SHOULD GROW WINGS

A MOVING proposition undoubtedly unique in the history of the public storage industry—involving a fish sensitive to overhead noise—has been turned down by the Emergency Trucking & Warehousing Corp., New York City. It was turned down because it couldn't be done, owing to the locations of the country's biggest city's elevated railroads.

An East Indian owned a fish which was being kept in the Aquarium and which he wanted to display in Times Square. The East Indian walked into the office of the Emergency corporation, at 586 Washington Street, and offered F. X. Pruziner, the company's president, $250 if he would transport the fish to Times Square without passing under an elevated railroad structure. The owner of the "goods" explained that the overhead racket might kill the fish.

Mr. Pruziner visualized the city's transit map and found that here was a moving job impossible to perform except by airplane. The Aquarium is located at the Battery, the tip end of Manhattan Island. To reach Times Square, at Forty-second Street, except through the air, the fish would have to pass under one or more of the Second, Third, Sixth or Ninth Avenue elevated railroad structures.

CALIFORNIANS SUPPORT SPEED MOTORWAY PLAN

WAREHOUSEMEN in all lines of the industry in California are giving united support to the new plan of the California State Automobile Association to have the State purchase straight rights-of-way between the larger cities and establish thereon through trunk-line motorways from which local traffic would be barred, and on which the speed limit would be raised from the present 35 miles an hour on the highways to 50 miles an hour or more, with a minimum limit of 30 miles an hour.

One of the great handicaps to the present operation of motor trucks in the warehousing industry is traffic congestion on the outskirts of large cities in California. If these trunk-line highways can be established, they will permit steady movement of through traffic at high speeds between San Diego and Los Angeles, Los Angeles and San Francisco, San Francisco and Fresno, San Francisco and Sacramento, San Francisco and Portland and Portland and Seattle.

The plan, as advanced by the automobile association, a cooperative organization of motorists with some 50,000 members, is to build such a high-speed trunk line motorway 30 feet wide, enlarging to 50 feet at the points—ten or fifteen miles apart—at which the local highways are permitted to enter it. These local highways, one on each side of the main motorway, would be each 20 feet, with parkway space 15 feet wide between each local highway and the motorway. Crossings of railroads, electric lines, cross-country highways and so on would be either under or over the motorway, to avoid delay and danger. Traffic would operate in two lines, one each way, on the main motorway, and only one way on each of the local highways which parallel it. Time of operation of trucks would be reduced by 20 to 25 per cent, according to local warehousemen.

In Mr. Bridgman's Memory

The Psi Upsilon Fraternity held a national memorial meeting in New York recently in memory of Herbert L. Bridgman, who, vice-president of the Brooklyn Warehouse & Storage Co., died at sea on Sept. 24. He was a member of the American Warehousemen's Association, National Furniture Warehousemen's Association, New York State Warehousemen's Association and New York Furniture Warehousemen's Association. Mr. Bridgman was business manager of the Brooklyn Standard Union, a Regent of the University of the State of New York and noted as an explorer, and was formerly a president of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association.

HOOVER CITES SEVEN DISTRIBUTION WASTES

THE "wastes of the present-day system" of distribution in America are summarized by Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, in his annual report covering 1924, as follows:

"1. The waste of an unnecessary number of purchase and sale transactions; that is, an unnecessary number of links in the distribution chain and an unnecessary number of different chains from the same center of production to the same center of consumption.

"2. The waste in transportation of inferior and unsalable products.

"3. The waste in decay arising from delayed movements and repeated handling.

"4. The waste from inadequate facilities for expeditious handling, both in transportation and terminals, and the waste in unnecessary transportation through blind consignment and cross-hauls in search of consumers.

"5. The waste from uncontrolled distribution, by which local gluts and famines are created, with consequent destructive fluctuation in price levels and stimulation to speculation.

"6. The waste from the destruction of agricultural capital itself through inadequate return by crowding the market in periods of slight overproduction.

"7. The waste in cost of speculation and hazards in distribution production by all of the above because either the producer or the consumer must pay through larger margins to cover such risks."

It has been the view of the Department of Commerce, Mr. Hoover states, "that the best remedy for these evils lies in the extension of cooperative marketing and in the better organization of the distributors at the terminal markets." He adds that the Department of Commerce has proposed a definite plan which, in his opinion,, will "mobilize economic forces to reduce these wastes with a minimum of Governmental intervention."

The Division of Domestic Commerce in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce has, the report states, "commenced studies in plant location, the relative importance of regional sales, packing, warehousing and cancellations."

Educational Advertising

The Bekins Van & Storage Co., with offices in San Francisco, Oakland, Fresno and Los Angeles, is publishing a series of newspaper advertisements explaining the instructions issued to employees. "Live Up to Our Advertising" is the slogan of this publicity, and enough space is purchased to attract the attention of the most casual reader.

The purpose is to give the prospective customer assurance that the representative of the Bekins company will do what he says he will do and that anything shipped through this company will be handled precisely as the customer wants it handled and as the company agrees to do.

Early results have come from this advertising, according to Reed J. Bekins, manager of the San Francisco office, and it is being continued until the public becomes familiar with the work of the Bekins employees.

Tobacco Storage Center

The Hiden Storage & Forwarding Corporation of Newport News, Va., of which P. W. Hiden is the head, has built up at Newport News one of the largest tobacco storage and forwarding centers in the world. It is claimed that approximately 60 per cent of the tobacco products exported from this country are now passing through his terminals.

Mr. Hiden took over, under lease from the War Department, the 52 immense warehouses at Newport News erected for storage of war materials. They are built of wood with concrete foundations, and measure 100 by 200 feet. They are located on the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway and are equipped with modern loading and storage facilities.

Under construction are six new warehouses. They are approximately the same size as the Government buildings and will cost about $100,000.

FALL BUSINESS GOOD ALONG PACIFIC COAST

FALL business in receiving shipments of household goods and in moving them immediately into residences was exceptionally good during September, October and November, according to officials of the central division of the Pacific Coast Furniture Warehousemen's Association. The annual winter movement of families planning to become permanent residents of California began rather earlier than usual, thus increasing this class of business about 20 per cent over that of the corresponding period of 1923.

One firm reported an increase of more than 50 per cent in this class of business during the three months, as compared with the same period in 1923, and attributes the increase very largely to advertising in warehousing publications of national circulation published in the East.

The furniture storage business also kept up better than usual throughout the fall months, due to the fact that many families moving their effects to California from other States leave their furniture in the warehouse, upon arrival, until they have decided where they will locate and have obtained housing accommodations there.

Some improvement in the handling of furniture shipments by the railroads also was noted by California furniture warehouse and transfer men, attributed in part to the campaign which the coast association has been conducting to that end.

Better packing and crating, as advocated by the National Furniture Warehousemen's Association, was in evidence in shipments received at San Francisco and Oakland.

NORFOLK ARMY BASE TO U. S. SHIPPING BOARD

PIERS and warehouses at the Army Base will be repaired immediately, the terminals will be leased without delay, probably to the city of Norfolk, and the Shipping Board will concentrate its port activities on the property just as soon as such plans can be mapped out, according to announcement made in Norfolk, O'Connor announced during a visit here this week.

The property has been turned over to the Shipping Board by an executive order by President Coolidge, and T. V. O'Connor, the board's chairman, said the terminal would be put in first class condition and operated as a base for steamers of the Shipping Board without further delay.

Repairs to the piers and warehouses will cost in the neighborhood of $600,000, the amount having been made available already. Local Shipping Board offices are being moved to the base.

Since the completion of the new city piers, the fertilizer traffic has been transferred from the Army Base. This business reaches an annual tonnage close to 100,000 tons, and at the new pier it will have an insurance rate of 38.04 cents per $100, said to be one of the lowest rates in existence.

Storage rates at the new terminal for nitrates and potash will be 20 cents a ton per month, or 80 cents per annum ending June 30. The handling charges are 50 cents per ton for each handling, but the layout of the pier, making it possible for tonnage to be handled directly from steamer to cars, will eliminate two handling charges on business moving out upon arrival.

The new pier is connected with eight trunk line railroads by the Norfolk & Portsmouth Belt Line, affording distribution possible at a minimum cost. With low insurance rates, reasonable handling, unexcelled facilities and the railroad connections, distributors of nitrates and potash here contend that few terminals have equal advantages.

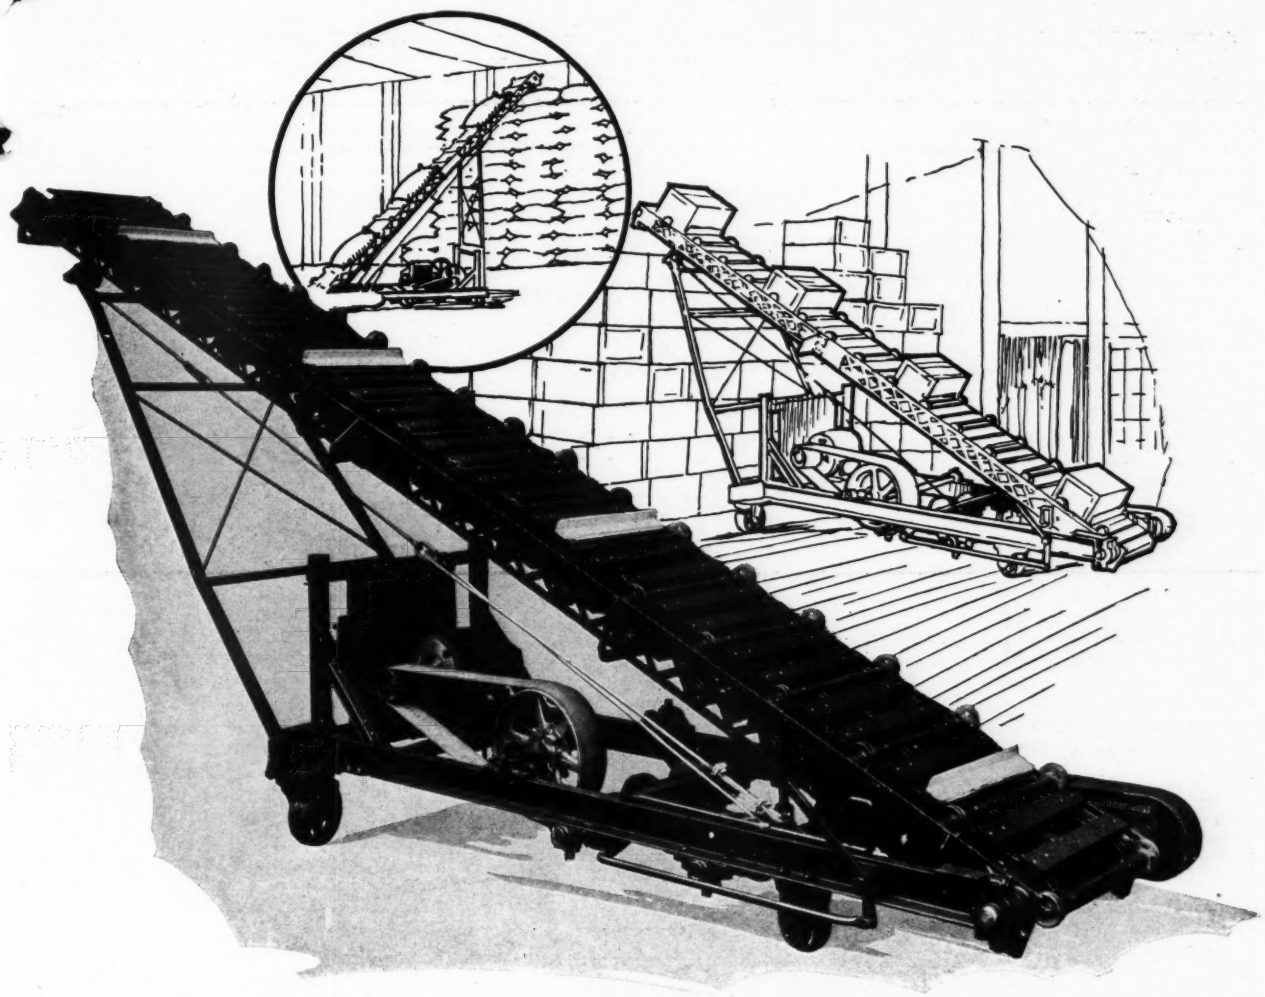

A. M. Titus Lectures

Anson M. Titus, secretary of the Massachusetts Warehousemen's Association and a recognized authority on warehouse rate-making, recently addressed the senior class of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston, in the course upon business management on "Warehouse Rate-Making" as determined and exemplified by the formulæ set down in the American Warehousemen Association's encyclopedia.

Are Your Piling Methods Up-to-date?

PILING goods by hand is now just as unwarranted as other expensive hand labor operations which modern methods have rendered obsolete. The Mathews Pile-Evator has made it so.

This tireless worker will help stack your bags, bales, or boxes at a cost so small that you can't even compare it to the labor it displaces. It is handy and convenient, easy to push around wherever the work requires. One man to lay the sacks or boxes on, another to take them off, and the Pile-Evator does the rest, the hard, laborious lifting and carrying. The work is speeded up and the cost reduced. Please write us for full information.

Special Facts About the Pile-Evator

Heavy, sturdy steel-frame construction, but not clumsy—one man can move it around an ordinary floor.

Self-contained power unit—gasoline or electric power.

Furnished in four standard sizes; maximum piling height at 50° angle, 20' 6".

Maximum overall width of base frame, 44". Maximum height with Pile-Evator lowered, 6' 4". Will pass through doors, under sprinkler pipes, drop lights, etc.

MORSE LOOKS FORWARD TO BETTER CONDITIONS

IN his report as chairman of the merchandise division's executive committee, W. W. Morse, Minneapolis, reviewed in detail the simplifying of the warehouse forms which have been approved by the Department of Commerce, and discussed business conditions as affecting the industry

"The year 1923," Mr. Morse said, "was a period of marked depression in the business of merchandise warehousing. Again the fact was demonstrated that a depression in business does not make itself felt by the merchandise warehousemen until a year or two after it first bears down upon general business, and when it passes the warehouseman is the last to recover from its effects.

"With the good crops and high prices for farm products and the settlement of political questions, the year 1924 has marked a turn in the tide of business depression, and the outlook for general business in 1925 is again hopeful and promising, but for the most part the warehouseman still waits for goods to fill his vacant spaces. There can be no doubt but that with return of business activity in 1925 now so clearly on the way, general business will surely survive, but the merchandise warehouseman as a rule must not expect a complete return of the prosperity which he enjoyed in 1920 and 1921, until after general business actually gets under full swing and the factories of the country are producing enough goods to fill all orders and accumulate a surplus. During this period of waiting patience is necessary.

"Prior to the beginning of the World War the schedules of charges made by merchandise warehousemen were on a very low and unremunerative plane. Handling charges in many instances were being almost given away. The war, with its tremendous demands for warehouse-space for the accumulation of goods and its stimulation of thought in every line of endeavor to intense activity, brought about a study of costs on the part of warehousemen which resulted in the development of wholly new ideas on those matters and the publication of handling schedules, guides and tariffs more adequately reflecting the necessary revenue required to put the warehousing business on a par with other lines of effort.

"During the post-war depression of 1922, 1923 and 1924 severe pressure has been put upon the merchandise warehouseman to abandon existing schedules and go back to pre-war levels, although his labor, taxes, rents and other expenses have been but slightly, if at all, reduced.

"If now, with the return of our prosperity as warehousemen just in sight, we lose our nerve and, discouraged by the long period of poor business, we abandon the ground gained and go back to the practices of other years and abandon our whole rate structure, we shall be guilty of the greatest folly in which any set of business men has been known to engage. Easy is the descent into the pit, difficult the escape.

"The times demand courage, steadiness and a look ahead. The warehouseman who brings down his rate schedules now and fills his house at cut rates will in a little while see his competitors fill their houses at remunerative rates, while he has a full house and a return from it below his actual costs of operation."

IN THE FEBRUARY ISSUE

FURTHER details regarding the Chicago convention of the American Warehousemen's Association and Central Warehousemen's Club will be published in the February number of Distribution & Warehousing.

DAY PAY VS. TON PAY IN HANDLING OF GOODS

In every case, tonnage advocates have one basis of pay regardless of commodity, yet we find these costs vary greatly, being as low as 34c. and as high as 71c. per ton for round trip.

If tonnage is equally divided between high, low and in between, very well, but if it is not, then what? Why, either the laborer or the employer profits excessively and I can see no good reason why either should gamble on anything so vital to their business interests.

The warehouseman receives different rates for handling; why shouldn't he pay different rates and let each commodity stand on its own feet? Understand, please, I do not say tonnage pay plans are a failure and cannot be made as advantageous to all concerned as pay by day methods, but I do say that I have not seen or heard of one in operation that is. The objections are:

Arguments Against Tonnage

1. The minimum per day, for on this minimum the degree of success or failure of the whole plan depends; a daily minimum actually offers encouragement and reward to men to slow down one day, get the minimum wage, then speed up the next to get excess tonnage Therefore, any tonnage plan to be successful should be based on an average rate per day over a period of at least a week.

2. The unfairness in paying by tonnage on all commodities regardless of character.

3. Inability to have an elastic organization that can be shifted from task to task or place to place as found necessary or desirable.

4. The increased cost of making up pay rolls, which is by no means a small item.

These objections alone, to me at least, disqualify the tonnage plan for warehouse use.

For the day pay plan, it can be said, it has none of the objections just cited. It permits of movement of men from one task to another and insures them a steady fixed weekly income, known in advance, which cannot help but create better satisfied workmen and a far more valuable employee.

Our own experience has been that in order to absorb lost motion and unproductive labor, we cannot allow our unloading and stowing cost to exceed 35 per cent of the revenue nor the delivery cost 40 per cent of the revenue, and whenever our costs exceed these percentages then one of two remedies must be applied—either methods must be changed to reduce costs, or handling charges raised to a point where these percentages will obtain; and whichever one of the two methods under discussion will, in your particular operation, accomplish the greatest reduction under these percentages, that is the one you should by all means follow.

And that brings us up to this point—that in the final analysis what really counts is not HOW we can compute the laborer's wage, but WHAT HE RETURNS for the pay, and not HOW many cents per ton it costs to handle a given commodity but WHAT PERCENTAGE of the revenue it costs.

The Banquet

A feature of the convention was the banquet, held on Wednesday evening and addressed by William Jennings Bryan, who made a hit by commenting that one branch of the warehousing industry was not unfamiliar to him by reason of his having on a number of occasions had to place some of his political views in cold storage.

The invocation was offered by the Rev. Von Ogden Vogt, D.D., pastor of the Wellington Avenue Congregational Church. The introductory address was made by Gardner Poole, Boston, president of the A. W. A. Frank A. Horne, president of the Merchants Refrigerating Co., New York, was toastmaster and introduced A. R. Brunker, chairman of the board of the Liquid Carbonic Co., Chicago, who talked on "The Business Trend," and Ralph Parlette, Chicago, whose "Out of My Cold Storage Tank" was a flow of wit and philosophy.

Mr. Brunker and Mr. Parlette emphasized that the people should be on guard against radicalistic tendencies and should advocate preservation of the Constitution.

Mr. Horne in his talk brought out the interesting fact that the Chicago convention was attended by five past presidents of the American—Philip Godley, Philadelphia; Homer McDaniel, Cleveland; George S. Lovejoy, Boston; James F. Keenan, Pittsburgh, and Willard W. Morse, Minneapolis.

After the banquet a cotillon and other forms of dancing provided entertainment for the delegates and their ladies.

Wagon Pads

Insurance Against Damage Claims—

But better still, insurance of satisfied customers.

When a woman has carefully saved and planned the spending of the family's hard-earned money for polished mahogany and walnut, she takes great pride in it. She spends much "elbow grease" in keeping it looking like new. You can be sure that she is particular how it is handled when it is moved. The mover who does the job right is advertised in the most potent way—by word of mouth.

"Protecto" wagon Pads take proper care of fine furniture. The soft denim covering will not mar the finest varnish. The thick padding of lightly felted cotton, cushions the heaviest weight safely. The quilting in small squares prevents thin spots.

Our piano and phonograph covers are made the same way.

KATS
THE TIRES WITH NINE LIVES

The final test of a tire is the service it gives

In designing and building the Kelly Kat, every requirement of a truck tire has been considered.

The notches in the sides and tread are so placed as to give the greatest possible amount of traction.

The depth of the notches is made sufficient to allow the heat to penetrate equally to all parts of the tire during vulcanization. This insures smooth, even wear.

The rubber compound used in the Kelly Kat is the one which twenty-five years experience and study have proved to be the toughest, most resilient and longest wearing.

As a result, Kelly Kats are able to show remarkable results in actual service. Nearly any truck owner who has used Kelly Kats will tell you that they give more traction, better cushioning and greater average mileage than any other type of heavy-duty truck tires he has ever used.

There are no Caterpillar tires but Kelly Kats

Railroad Standards Are Acme's, Too

Before a railroad will accept a car it has ordered, the railroad's own inspector makes certain that every detail complies with the specifications. It is the surest way to know that the car is built to railroad specifications.

Acme Vans are built that way. Our engineers, working in your interest, make careful tests and analyses of the units that go into Acme Vans. These engineers make sure that the finished chassis and body in every detail complies with your specifications. We have set the standard of your specifications unreasonably high. That is what gives you a Van that performs wonderfully well for years on end, with exceptionally low repair and maintenance costs.

Acme Van bodies, built entirely at the Acme plant, under conditions that favor good workmanship and economy in cost, are perfectly fitted for the job.

There are ten models of the Acme Truck, graded in capacity but not in quality to suit every trucking job.

1925 WAREHOUSE DIRECTORY

SHIPPER'S INDEX

(A Guide to Representative Merchandise, Cold Storage and Household Goods Warehouses, Forwarders, Terminals and Transfer Companies, Arranged Alphabetically by States and Towns)

THIS revised edition of the Directory of the public warehouse industry has two major purposes. One is to give the shippers of the country a reference list of warehouses equipped to store and distribute their raw and manufactured products. The other is to provide for the industry itself a record of the companies engaged in all branches of the commercial storage business—merchandise, household goods and cold storage.

In this year-round reference work is to be found information regarding warehouse companies that will be consulted by the shipper, the storage executive and the public. This information relates to names, addresses, officers, year of establishment, investment, storage and distribution and pool car facilities, space statistics, motor truck and team service, railroad private sidings and association memberships. In consulting listings, the following points should be kept in mind:

Where a bold face star appears after a company's name, it means that the information in the listing is up to date—that the facts and figures were obtained from Information Sheets distributed in connection with this revised Directory. Where no bold face star appears, the information is at least one year old.

Where the investment figure given is small, this may mean that it covers fixtures and equipment only—not taking into account real estate, etc.

Where the statement is made that a company is bonded, it should not be construed that the company's entire available space necessarily is bonded; for example, USCB may mean that only part of the space is United States Customs bonded.

Toward the close of each listing, one or more commodities may appear in bold face type. This means that the company specializes in storage of this commodity or commodities.

In mentioning memberships, only national and sectional and State associations have been considered. Companies may have membership in local warehousing and transport organizations also.

In addresses, company is located on a street unless otherwise indicated.

Shippers' Index

Including the 1925 Annual Warehouse Directory

A Guide to representative Merchandise, Cold Storage and Household Goods Warehouses, Forwarders, Terminals, and Transfer Companies, arranged by States and Towns

"ANDY SAYS"

"A HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR TO ALL"

Not in the history of Warehousing or publishing
Has there ever been Compiled, edited and issued
A comprehensive reference volume
Quite like this 1925
Annual Warehouse Directory.

There have been directories
In many trades and industries,
And there have been Warehouse Directories
In the past,
But we like to think
That no previous book
Has approached this one—
This 1925 Warehouse Directory—
In completeness of detail,
In wealth of information,
In reference-value for
The men of the industry
Which this Directory serves.

With the development of Warehousing as an industry
Which is becoming Nationally recognized
By Big Business and
By the Federal Government,
Warehousemen themselves have Come to make the Significant word
"Service"
An obsession—nothing less.
"Service" is stressed in Business paper advertising
And in mail circularizing
And in convention speeches
And in warehousing salesmanship.
The industry's customers,
The national distributors,
Have come to recognize that
The Warehouseman of today
Strives to sell "service."

That word "service"
Is symbolic of
The purpose and reason
Which are the background
Of this Annual Warehouse Directory.

The Class Journal Company,
By giving you this Annual Warehouse Directory
Is performing
"Service"
Which Distributing America
Recognizes is essential
To its business welfare.

Publishing a business paper like
Distribution & Warehousing
Is a fair-sized job in itself.
Combining with that job
The issuing of the Annual Warehouse Directory
Is the biggest task
Which our advertising
And editorial staffs Undertake during Any one year.

Without the support
And cooperation
Of Warehousing itself
It couldn't be done
Successfully.
That it has been done
For 1925
Is a testimonial
To the broad vision of
The men of an industry
Which is witnessing
Development and expansion
Along progressive lines
Because based on Ideas and ideals
Sound in intelligence
And fine in character.

The 1925 Directory
Is significant of Those ideas and ideals.

For the support
And cooperation
Which you fellows
In the Warehouse industry
Have extended in making
This year's Directory
The success which
You know, and I know, it is,
I thank you.

And we, the staff of Distribution & Warehousing,
Wish you all, a most prosperous
And Happy New Year in 1925.

The Warehouseman who advertises his ability to serve is deserving of the Shipper's first consideration.

For Los Angeles Distribution

To Southern California customers save yourself worry and money by putting a carload on our floors at regular intervals. We'll help you by prompt, accurate delivery to the customer. The difference in freight between car-lot and separate shipments pays our charges and leaves you a profit.

Send orders for this territory to us and we will consolidate those for adjacent points. Courtesy and efficiency, with prompt payment of charges, have built up for our service a reputation of which we are justly proud.

Our Warehouse Service

Have you investigated the economies and advantages of warehouse distribution? For many lines of business we are prepared to prove with figures furnished by the manufacturer himself that we can save him money by storage distribution as against establishing and operating a factory branch.

The Scope of Our Service

1. Receive merchandise:
   - (a) In carload lots from all railroads, which switch cars to our warehouse spur tracks without charge,
   - (b) From all steamers docking at San Francisco, handling with our fleet of motor trucks.
2. Provide storage and issue warehouse receipts accepted by banks, etc., as legal evidence of ownership.
3. Repack or recondition goods for reasonable fees.
4. Arrange for insurance coverage.
5. Provide office and clerical facilities for manufacturers and shippers desiring direct representation at point of storage.
6. Reship merchandise to railroad or steamship dock or redeliver in San Francisco, issuing uniform bills of lading, legal evidence of delivery.

Our five buildings of 400,000 square feet of first-class warehouse storage space, located in the wholesale districts, convenient to all railroad terminals and steamer docks, are at your constant disposal.

Cutting the Cost of Distribution

You may not always be able to get the saving which carload shipments give you over l.c.l. shipments. But where you want to reach any point in the Wilmington section (taking in Delaware, Eastern Pennsylvania, parts of Maryland and the Virginias) you CAN cut the cost of distribution by using the magnificent facilities of our new Terminal.

Warehousing: Two Storage Sheds covering 120,000 square feet. Open Storage Yard with wharf frontage of 500 feet. Transit Shed, with 48,000 square feet capacity directly connected with Storage Sheds (no transfer charge). Hazard Shed safely removed but directly on the tracks and wharf.

Construction: Fireproof construction. Sprinklered throughout. Concrete floors. Single-story type for quick, economical handling.

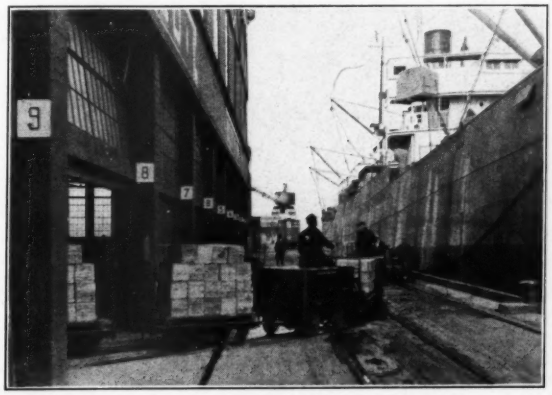

Railroad and Trucking Service: Terminal tracks connect with three trunk lines—Pennsylvania R.R., B. & O., Reading. Platforms on either side of Sheds for car and truck deliveries. New Concrete Road makes direct platform connection for truck deliveries to and from the Warehouses and Open Yard.

Rates: Storage and Delivery Rates are unusually reasonable—particularly with volume business coming in or going out by water.

Warehouse Receipts: We issue negotiable or non-negotiable warehouse receipts as desired. Banks are accepting the first as collateral for loans on stored merchandise.

The above is a short summing up of what we have to offer. The Personal Service which we have developed insures this added advantage that our office acts for you exactly as your own traffic department would act, were it on the spot here.
Write for details of our facilities, our Service—and let us quote you rates on any specific shipment for storage or distribution from warehouse. Here is at least the possibility of cutting your distribution costs.

KEEP IT UP!

One step won't take you very far, you've got to keep on walking;
One word won't tell them what you are, you've got to keep on talking;
One inch won't make you tall, you've got to keep on growing;
One little "ad" won't do it all, you've got to keep 'em going.

The Whole Corn Belt Is At Our Door

FREE switching connects our loading platform with five trunk lines. That means that no matter where your factory may be, you can ship to us by carload with the minimum amount of switching, time and freight.

It also means that reshipments we make for you go by the most direct route, in the shortest possible time, with the least amount of handling or transferring. Practically every point in the Middle West can be reached direct from our door by L. C. L. shipment.

This is a big factor in successful pool-car distribution, and one that should incline you in our favor as the distributors, when you decide to take advantage of the many benefits of that method.

We furnish you with all the facilities of a branch house, yet ask you to pay much less than branch-house costs for equal service.

We invite investigation. No doubt our close acquaintance with conditions in the Middle West can supply information of use to you. It is at your service without cost or obligation. Ask for it.

Midland Warehouse—No. 3

MIDLAND WAREHOUSES

The Center of Distribution

MIDLAND Service assures complete Chicago and National distribution quickly, and at lowest cost.

Midland Warehouses:—No. 1 at 43rd and Robey Streets, No. 2 at 15th Place and Western Avenue, and No. 3 at 15th Street and Western Avenue—are in the center of Chicago, close to the "loop" and Stock Yards Districts.

Midland Warehouses adjoin Universal Freight Stations of the Chicago Junction Railway—the terminal belt line—connecting with all of the thirty-nine railroads which diverge from Chicago, covering the entire country, and connecting with all world trade routes.

THERE are no cartage or trap-car delays in making less-than-carload shipments through Midland. There are provided ample facilities for unloading and loading cars, trucks or drays.

Midland's one million square feet of floor area offers public storage space. Also large or small blocks are available on lease at moderate rentals and low insurance rates.

Midland Service meets all Warehousing and Distributing needs; and at minimum cost the competent Midland Organization relieves you and your sales organization of all distribution-detail worries.

Inquiries for information and rates are invited.

Our New Warehouse Means Still Better Service

In addition to our downtown warehouse, we are now able to offer a service from the heart of the Central Manufacturing District.

Private switch tracks at both locations connect with all Trunk Lines entering Chicago, which gives us unequalled facilities for the delivery and distribution of Pool Cars. We also have ample space for the storage of "spot stocks."

Progressive Warehouses

NOWHERE else is there to be found so useful and comprehensive a list of progressive warehouse companies as that which is comprised in this Directory Number and in the Shippers' Index appearing in each issue of DISTRIBUTION & WAREHOUSING. Here will be found merchandise and household goods warehouses, scattered throughout the length and breadth of the United States and Canada. Here the traffic or distribution manager will find the warehouse to handle his products in his logical distribution center. Here the householdgoodsman will find his fellow householdgoodsman who will handle his shipment at its destination.

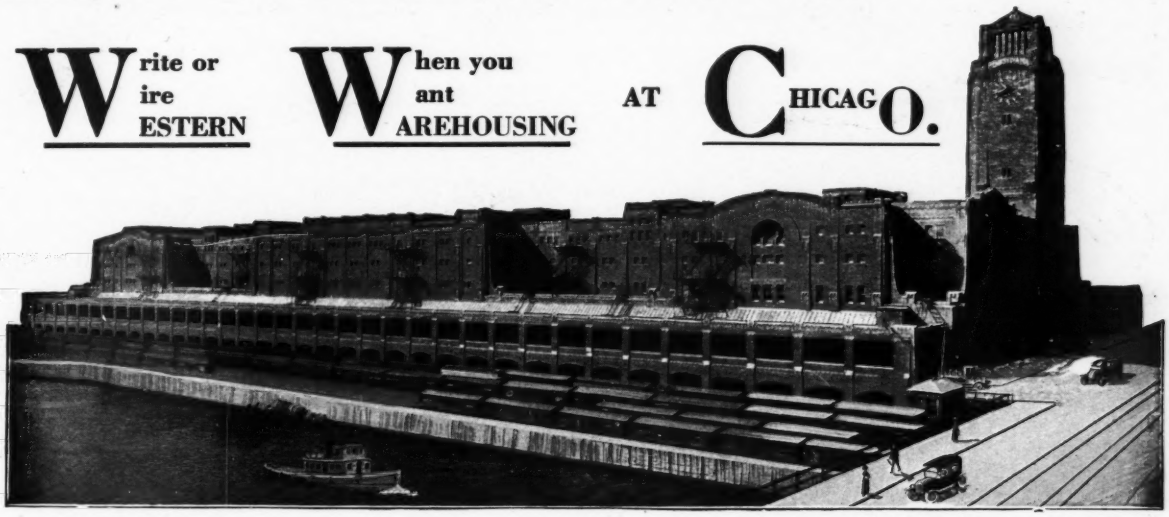

The 594 progressive warehouses whose announcements are herein geographically arranged have the facilities for rendering the service desired by the shipper. The leaders of the industry are represented by advertisements in these pages. There is no service in warehousing which they cannot render.

The Shippers' Index, supplementing this Directory, is the recognized reference medium for warehouse information. It is made up of live, experienced concerns. It is always up to date. It is revised monthly. It is used regularly by traffic managers and warehousemen.

The Warehouseman who advertises his ability to serve is deserving of the Shipper's first consideration

PEORIA, ILL.

THE largest warehouse in Illinois outside of Chicago offers certain advantages not to be found elsewhere.

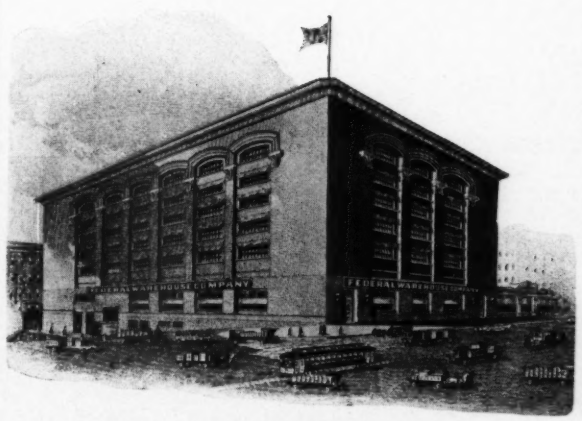

Lack of congestion is one of them. The millions of tons which congest and retard the terminals of a great city are absent; yet there is volume enough to guarantee complete facilities and skilled direction. Thus goods are moved more rapidly and with equal skill out of Peoria.

The greatest-buying part of the state's population, including many of the large corporations, lies within overnight haul of Peoria. Fourteen railroads, two electric lines, two steamboat lines, and a well-organized fleet of modern motor trucks assure you direct and economical connections.

Intelligent cooperation with your traffic department further reduces costs of distribution. Men who have spent a lifetime in movement of goods are in charge. No economy escapes them. No errors get past them.

If Illinois is your market, Peoria should be your marketplace. Send a few carloads to us, and watch deliveries improve while costs come down.

To Us

Fred Perkins out in What Cheer, Iowa, wants a case of your tomatoes (or shoes or clothes-pins). It's your business to see that he gets them.

But can you afford to lie awake nights until he acknowledges receipt? Not if you're going to get anything worthwhile done in your three-score and ten years.

The thing for you to do is send us a carload of your shoelaces (or soap or syrup) right now, and let us send Fred his one case.

We are nearer Fred than you are. That saves freight. Your carload to us takes a lower rate. That saves freight. Our traffic department sees that the lowest rate from us to Fred is applied; something you might not have time to do yourself. That saves freight. All considered, Fred gets his hairpins (or towels or collar buttons) a lot cheaper.

And a lot quicker, for we are only a day away from Fred, while you may be a week. While waiting for Fred, your goods are in clean, odorless, fireproof quarters.

There are a lot of Fred Perkinses between St. Paul, Kansas City, St. Louis and Chicago. Altogether they can buy up your carload in a day. And they will, too, when they get such good service.

Meanwhile you are freed from bother, while your department makes a good showing on the trial balance. Consign your inkwells (or socks or scrub-brushes) to

Alice in Storageland

ALICE rubbed her eyes. How strange everything in Storageland seemed! A smiling man nodded to her. He held a great map.

"Why is everyone so happy in Storageland?" Alice asked timidly.

"Transports of joy come from painless transporting here; a mile saved is a smile won, and when a warehouse distributes good service we commodity distributors scatter smiles."

Alice put on her most understanding expression and ventured: "But why must you study that map?"

"The map I hold is the cause of the grin on the map I wear," the gentleman explained. "I have found here, where you see New Orleans, the Standard Warehouse Company. It is so near a great river it can truck directly to ships that go all over the world. It does this at a saving, because it adjoins the great Dock System of the Port."

"That must be convenient for concerns that export," Alice observed wisely.

"Brillianter and brillianter!" the commodity distributor smiled. "And the Standard Warehouse has its private railroad sidings, connecting with all railroads entering the city."

"How fine for the shippers!" Alice cried. "But," she added shrewdly, "is the Standard Warehouse careful to creditably represent the shipper?"

"Service is the Standard Warehouse Company's own invention. The shipper couldn't do better if he went there and handled the goods himself."

(Watch for further Adventures of Alice in Storageland.)

What They Say:-

"INTERESTS FULLY PROTECTED"

"We feel that in dealing with your warehouse our interests are fully protected and looked after by yourself the same as if we had a man right there on the job.

"We wish to say that the service which the Central Storage Company has rendered us has been without a fault. The harmony and co-operation given us in the distribution of our product has been of a large aid of a kind toward our advertising. We are pleased to say that the name Central Storage Company stands for the word 'Service.'"

"STOCK KEPT IN GOOD CONDITION"

"We are very well satisfied with the way you have handled the various lines we have shipped you on consignment for our acccount and for distribution to our customers here and to out of town jobbers.

"Your service has always been careful and prompt.

"You also are particular that our stock is kept in good condition, which our customers appreciate as much as we do."

"IMMEDIATE AND CAREFUL ATTENTION"

"We are taking this opportunity to advise that your service in the way of handling our products in your vicinity has been satisfactory in every respect. Our orders have always received immediate and careful attention and we wish to commend you in the way you are handling our work. Detailed reports have reached us promptly and for this reason we wish to thank you for the special attention given to our line."

"CHARGES VERY REASONABLE—LINE COMPLICATED"

"We are pleased to say that the service you are rendering us is highly satisfactory and has proven a great help to us.

"We find your warehouse charges to be very reasonable, and your handling and distribution cost is less than we could do it for ourselves.

"As you are aware, our line is quite complicated, in that we have so many models, with different finishes for the same model, so that we must say that you have promptly made shipment of all orders given you in a most satisfactory manner and without error, and we feel it but right that we should express our satisfaction just as readily as we would our dissatisfaction, should it occur."

"TWENTY YEARS OF SATISFACTORY SERVICE"

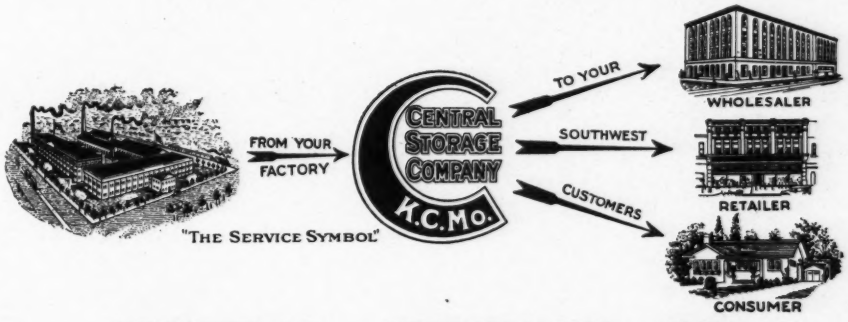

"Just this morning the writer was checking back on our past records, and he was surprised to note that we have been doing business with your company since 1904, making a period of practically twenty years that you have satisfactorily served our company.

"The above simply shows that you have served our company most satisfactorily and even at this time, we are frank in stating that your service is better than we are receiving from any warehouse company at this time."

Distribution & Warehousing

"Your journal is a wonderful magazine and we look forward to each issue."—W. A. Whitmore, Pres., North Phila. Stor. Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

"We think you get out the livest journal that is published, and it certainly gives good information to warehouses."—Theo. F. King, Pres. Chattanooga Whse. & Cold Stor. Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

"I want to assure you of my desire to co-operate with the wonderful work which you are doing for the warehouse industry, for which I commend and congratulate you."—A. H. Greeley, Pres. Amer. Chain of Whses. and Pres. General Storage Co., Cleveland, O.

The Meeting Place
Shippers and Warehousemen

ONE of the largest national distributors, manufacturing a product known the world over, has announced that hereafter it will distribute exclusively through warehouses. In the selection of the warehouses to be used, DISTRIBUTION & WAREHOUSING has had an important part. This distributor, like hundreds of others of similar calibre, is a regular reader of DISTRIBUTION & WAREHOUSING and uses the Shippers' Index as a guide and source of information in the selection of the warehousemen with which to do business.

The Shippers' Index of DISTRIBUTION & WAREHOUSING is the meeting place of the man who needs warehouse facilities and the man who has them to offer.

SPRINGFIELD, MO.

Back Up Your Sales Department

CLOSING their sales will be a lot easier to the men on the southwestern territories if they can name a date of delivery, and the customer gets the goods on or before that date. Repeat orders are given readily after once receiving such service. Emergency requests are no trouble to the firm that can satisfy them in one or two days. The good will of a customer thus supplied is worth more than any amount you can name, yet the actual cost is far less than if you had shipped from your factory.

Yet this is but a small part of the advantage you can gain by placing a spot stock in Springfield. Ask what others you can have. They vary with the line you sell, but we can supply all. A note is enough. Write it now.

The Meeting Place of Shippers and Warehousemen

ONE of the largest national distributors, manufacturing a product known the world over, has announced that hereafter it will distribute exclusively through warehouses. In the selection of the warehouses to be used, DISTRIBUTION & WAREHOUSING has had an important part. This distributor, like hundreds of others of similar calibre, is a regular reader of DISTRIBUTION & WAREHOUSING and uses the Shippers' Index as a guide and source of information in the selection of the warehousemen with which to do business.

The Shippers' Index of DISTRIBUTION & WAREHOUSING is the meeting place of the man who needs warehouse facilities and the man who has them to offer.

KEEP IT UP!

One step won't take you very far, you've got to keep on walking;

Our "Distinctive Distribution Service" has solved many problems for many shippers — Let it solve yours!

See what we mean by CORBET SERVICE

In the first place—Traffic and Packing information without charge. Also, without charge, we carefully inspect all shipments upon arrival for concealed damage. In case of damage or shortage, we immediately file proper claims for you.

DISTRIBUTION and STORAGE

Shipments care of Corbet Service Company may be handled in three ways upon arrival. The entire shipment may be immediately reshipped to your customers via L. C. L. Express, Parcel Post, Export or Coastwise, S.S. or by Motor Transport. Or part of shipment may be reshipped at once and the balance stored for your account pending delivery of future orders. Or entire shipment may be stored pending your further instructions.

Transshipments are made direct from car unless for a steamer not then ready to receive freight, in which case goods are placed in our warehouse pending acceptance by steamer. Transshipment papers made out when necessary without charge.

Each consignment recorded on separate sheet. Accurate files, cross indexed, provide perpetual inventory. Effective tracing methods used in case of "strays."

WAREHOUSE RECEIPTS

WEIGHING and RE-MARKING

Transshipments are weighed when necessary and re-marked in accordance with your instructions.

REPACKING

We can break case or bales, etc., for you and ship in smaller units as instructed.

DELIVERIES

In Metropolitan District, usually made same day on which instructions are received, in any event within twenty-four hours.

OUR WAREHOUSES

Our warehouses are the one-story type and flooded with light. They are of brick construction with concrete floors and are absolutely fireproof.

CO-OPERATION

The basic idea of Corbet Service is to so completely fill the needs of a client that the client gradually comes to rely implicitly in Corbet. We can assure you of real co-operation.

Moral—Use Warehouses

SOME one once remarked that among the names of the greatest inventors should be that of the man who invented interest. Perhaps the same list should include the inventor of discount. An interesting story is told of a manufacturer of electrical appliances who used in his factory a material which was quite valuable, in fact so much so that he found his working capital insufficient to meet his needs and as a result his credit began to be impaired. The producer of this material usually sold it on terms, sixty days net or 3% discount for cash in ten days.

As considerable quantities were used by this manufacturer he evolved this plan: He arranged with his local bank to loan him sufficient money on negotiable warehouse receipts to pay the manufacturer. This enabled him to buy in carload lots and thus secure a lower price. The 3% saved paid all the warehouse charges and bank interest and left a very tidy sum at the end of the year. RESULT—Everybody Happy.—Sid Smith.

Our Unit Space Service is devised for that class of merchandise not in standard packages or where the variety of commodities does not admit of equitable rating.

This typical street scene at Bush Terminal reveals the superior steel and concrete construction of Bush Buildings, for the housing of stocks in private compartments as required, under adequate general fire-protection and sprinkler systems rated at 100%, reducing insurance rates to lowest point, from 8c. to 20c. per $100 per annum.

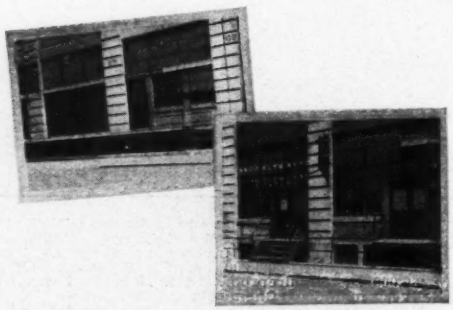

Any customer may maintain his own stock room in the Bush Distribution Depot at a cost exactly proportioned to the volume of his business, making use of facilities already provided and paying only as he uses.

Maximum Elevator Capacity permits the safe and rapid handling of the widest range in size, shape and weight of packages.

The Distribution Service Depot houses a branch of the American Railway Express and a sub-station of the United States Post Office. Both telegraph companies maintain offices here. There is also a station for sending and receiving commercial wireless messages, and a branch bank of the Bank of America, affording all banking facilities.

Fleets of Bush Terminal tugboats and car floats ply the waters of New York harbor in the greatest distribution service in the world.

Twice daily a fleet of fifty automobile trucks owned and operated by Bush Terminal serve the district known as Greater New York and containing about one-fifteenth the whole population of the United States.

Efficient Service— Worth Considering

Fellow Warehousemen:-

Our organization is the result of 30 years of honest and conscientious service in the handling of high grade household effects and art collections, which has gained us a reputation second to none in this City.

The consequences are, we ship from New York, perhaps more property of the higher grade for responsible people, than any other concern in New York.

We solicit shipments of a similar character, wherein, recommendation will act as a credit and in return offer ours, which should be handled in a like manner.

We are members of The National Furniture Warehousemen's Association and The New York Furniture Warehousemen's Association.

Judson Freight Forwarding Company

Are pioneers in consolidated carload service on household goods. It is about twenty-five years ago that we first recognized the possibilities of this domestic branch of our business. We at that time devoted our energies solely to the consolidation of carloads of westbound household goods. This being successful, we later developed the automobile consolidated car service and are now handling consolidated cars of both commodities between eastern and western points. We are prepared to assist our friends, old and new, in the development of their business. We will be glad to quote rates on any shipments you may now be bidding on, or on any that are ready.

YES—If you Export

YES—If you Import

YES—If you ship Household Goods

YES—If you ship Automobiles

Our receiving station for HOUSEHOLD GOODS AND AUTOMOBILES is located at 651 West 34th Street, New York City, and these shipments ARE LOADED IN THROUGH CARS BY EXPERTS in furniture and automobile handling and loading which, with reduced rates, shows a SAVING IN MONEY, WEAR AND TEAR AND MAKES SATISFIED PATRONS.

When you Warehousemen are figuring on packing household goods for export by all means get in touch with us for full information as to rail and ocean rates to all parts of the world.

To safeguard shipments and to avoid unnecessary delays, be sure to insert local address on bills of lading on all New York shipments. By complying with this rule of the railroad company you enable arrival clerk to reach consignee promptly, thereby helping the railroad company to clear their freight platforms, as this space is very limited in freight yards in New York City. It also saves your customer demurrage charges.

Dear Sirs:-

We could not too highly recommend you and your service to our customers. We have never known of a case where a customer has raised a criticism of the way you handled their goods; on the contrary, we have received expressions of praise of the service you have rendered.

We want to state for ourselves that we had an experience where goods were shipped to another warehouse and finding it impossible to secure satisfactory service for ourselves and our customers, we appealed to you, and both the customer and ourselves were perfectly satisfied.

We can readily understand why you have been successful, and your business has grown to such proportion, your service is A-1 and your terms and prices reasonable.

Taking pleasure in recommending you to your customers, and thanking you for past favors, we are.

Very truly yours,

MILLER NORTH BROAD STORAGE COMPANY,

The Neal Storage Co.,

Dear Sirs:

I want to express my appreciation of the splendid work you did in crating my furniture. I said to the movers here in St. Augustine, Messrs Pellicer and Peters. "Well, what do you think of the work?" and Mr. Peters replied "It is as fine work as I have ever seen"

It is only justice to acknowledge an artist in any line and I am truly appreciative and wonderfully satisfied with your work. I have no word of complaint to make.

Sincerely,

Mrs. T. H. George

If Your City Isn't Represented Here

Put it on the shippers' map by inserting your card in this space.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D.

STRAHON TRANSFER & STORAGE CO.

Sioux Falls' location and rail connections give a retail-price advantage to firms using it as a center of distribution. Short, direct hauls and reasonable charges add but little to wholesale prices.

Five railways connect Sioux Falls so intimately with the contiguous five hundred miles that no retailer in this territory thinks of buying elsewhere. So the market for your wares is not only near, but is in the habit of buying here.

Easily reached, and easily sold, you now only need to know if efficient service will be given your customers. This we can guarantee. The proof of the brewing is in the drinking. Send along a few carloads, and give us a chance to make good on that guarantee. Get our tariff on your commodity.

"THE HUB OF THE SOUTH"

Every town is a "Gateway," according to its boosters. But look on your map and see if there is a place more centrally or more strategically located as to railroads than Chattanooga for break-bulk shipments.

Grant said, "Chattanooga is the Hub of the South." He fought his campaigns on the basis of Chattanooga being the Hub.

For business it has even better geographical advantages than for war.

Good traffic managers save their companies thousands of dollars each year by the application of their intelligence and their knowledge of the problem of routing freight the most economical and best way.

We have not only the logical distribution point for the whole South, but more important still, we have the idea that working for you and your interests is the best way to increase our own success.

We have helped many large shippers with their distributing problems in this territory. Let us help you with yours.

Moral—Use a Public Warehouse

AN eastern manufacturer found it necessary to carry a stock in the middle west and for the sake of economy decided to locate a branch warehouse in a small town. He found a warehouse which seemed to meet his requirements which he could rent for a term of years very cheap. His shipping clerk cost him $30 per week and other expenses such as supplies, heat, telephone, extra help, etc., about $75 per month. All of these expenses seemed to be as low as could be expected and it apparently was a satisfactory arrangement. A survey of his business, however, indicated that the total movement through this branch amounts to only about 15 cars and as his expense sheet shows expenses as follows:

Rent, 12 months @ $50	$ 600
Salary, 52 weeks @ $30	1,560
Misc. Expense, 12 months @ $75	900
Total	$3,060

It shows a cost per car of over $200.

The estimated cost of handling his product through first class public warehouses is $60 to $75.—Sid Smith.

Moral — Use a Warehouse

SOME of us have heard of the business depression which is said to have followed the late unpleasantness. The big boss of a farm implement concern found that he had his forty acres about filled with tractors. His salesmen weren't sending in anything except excuses and expense accounts and he began to have an awful pain in the spot where his income tax used to grow. His superintendent told him that the back lot leaked when it rained and anyway a perfectly good tractor wasn't supposed to stand outdoors until after it was safely in the hands of some of the agricultural bloc, but he knew his business and instead of storing them in a public warehouse he let them stand until cotton went up and then put them in the factory and built them over again.—Sid Smith.

HUNTINGTON, W. VA.

Manufacturer—Producer—Shipper

Huntington offers you

Huntington is located ideal for caring for trade thru Southern West Virginia, Southern Ohio and Eastern Kentucky to several hundred Jobbers and thousands of Retailers.

With 5 Railroads entering Huntington or nearby and the Ohio River with its system of locks and dams makes shipping to a large territory thickly populated in a few hours an easy matter.

It is the gateway to the largest developed and undeveloped coal territory in the world. Huntington has been called the Gateway to the Ruhr of America.

Paved highways leading in 5 directions make for quick truck deliveries to outside points; over 100 miles of paved streets in the city proper.

Eighty-five per cent of Huntington people own or are paying for their homes. This makes good citizens and they spend money.

Maier has to offer you

A first class warehouse to care for your product.

A Branch House without the large maintenance cost.

Private side track to receive your cars from any railroad entering city—no switching charge.

Large assembling platforms, all covered with roof, to handle your Pool Cars. Our own trucks to make city deliveries or shipments.

A large basement, over 11,000 sq. ft. floor space, all cemented, temperature cool in summer and warm in winter.

A competent force of employees at your service every day. All instructions are handled in an intelligent manner.

An efficient and really confidential service.

Watchman day and night to protect your product.

All at a cost that is surprisingly low and from a responsible firm.

We take it that is why all the Nationally advertised lines and all the Railroads entering Huntington use us.

Moral—Use Warehouses

IN an Eastern city there is a manufacturer who makes a very high class product which is sold to foundries and smelters. For several years his trade has been growing in the states adjoining that in which his factory is located and about two years ago he sent a representative into the Middle West. Orders were easily secured, his prices were right, his products better than the local manufacturers could supply and apparently he had laid the foundation for a profitable business, but he soon found that he could not secure repeat orders and an investigation showed him that the entire difficulty lay in the fact that customers would not wait for shipments to come a thousand miles by local freight with all the dangers of delays and breakage.

His first intention was to rent space and open a branch office, but he found the cost prohibitive.

He has now discovered that he can ship to a public warehouse in carload lots and carry a stock from which his trade can be supplied immediately and greatly to his surprise the saving between the carload rate he now pays and the less than carlot rate which his customers formerly paid more than takes care of all the warehouse expense.—Sid Smith.

Agencies throughout the world

Three and one-half ton Federal Truck, equipped with U. S. Heavy Duty Cushion Tires, operated by Berry & Kelly, Contractors, of Elizabethtown, Ky., on Dixie Highway work.

Made in two complete sections. When pressed together on the rim, these assume the characteristics of a single tire. Hollowed out portions of each section meet to form a pressure-sealed hollow center which provides maximum cushioning.

Proving the Advantages of the New U. S. Heavy Duty Cushion Tire

NOW that truck operators have seen for themselves the performance of the new U. S. Heavy Duty Cushion Tire, it becomes more evident than ever that a great advance has been made in heavy truck tire design.

The remarkable advantages which this tire showed under extensive tests by United States Rubber Company engineers have been clearly demonstrated under daily use on all types of heavy service.

The U. S. Heavy Duty Cushion Tire has made the advantages of hollow center cushioning available for extremely wide truck tires.

U. S. Heavy Duty Cushion Tires are made in sizes from 8 to 16 inches inclusive. They fit all S. A. E. standard solid truck tire wheels and are pressed on the wheels the same as dual tires.

of Sensible Warehouse Savings

These wholesale grocers unload in record time with JACKLIFTS and Platforms.

Stackers (either electric or hand power) save men and time, but above all save valuable storage space. The installation shown here is in a Warehouse and Cold Storage Plant.

We can describe scores of warehouse installations of Lewis-Shepard Equipment which are showing big profits to the users. Nearly every day adds a new name of an enthusiastic warehouseman or distributor to our long list of customers. Our recommendations to you are based on facts, figures, and satisfied users—not on theory.

Are moths breeding in your warehouse?

One lot of moth-infested furniture —one moth-infested rug or carpet can quickly fill your warehouse full of moths. And even the most careful examination of goods received won't tell you whether they are infested or not. Moth eggs are too small to be seen, and it doesn't take very long for them to hatch into destructive moth worms.

ENOZ
KILLS MOTHS

(Will Not Stain)

It is a fine spray that penetrates into upholstery, carpets, rugs, etc., and kills every vestige of moth life. It kills moths and moth worms and destroys the eggs.

Leading warehousemen all over the country have used ENOZ for years. They recommend that each lot of goods be sprayed with ENOZ before piling away, and that the floors and walls of all rooms be sprayed.

If you have ever used ENOZ you know it is the one sure way of keeping your warehouse free from moths. If you haven't tried it, fill out the coupon below and take advantage of our special trial offer.

One Truck for Many Tasks

The purchase of one Model 10F Republic often serves the same purpose as adding several trucks of any other kind to a fleet.

10F is rated at 1½ tons. But 10F operates so economically and handily as to shame lightest trucks.

10F is rated at 1½ tons. But 10F is built so sturdily as to do work that balks many heavier trucks.

10F goes beyond comparison with present trucks of this rating because only 10F has the Republic rear axle which perfects power application; the five-bearing crankshaft, pressure oiling and air-cleaning, for maximum engine life; the exclusive Republic drive shaft brake, and other notable Republic betterments.

And 10F is just one of the Improved Republic models representing highest development of Republic economy. Lower first cost often puts a Republic truck into a fleet. Lower operating costs and long life soon result in a fleet completely standardized in the use of Republic trucks.
